Go to Chicago.
Lightning Milks Cows.
Earth's Biggest Automobile.
Your Body Is a Fishnet.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

CHICAGO, Ill., May 24.

DON'T FAIL to see this year's great and wonderful Century of Progress exposition in Chicago, greater, more impressive, more beautiful than ever.

At one o'clock on next Saturday afternoon a bugle will blow. Exposition parade, formal ceremonies, and the opening of the exposition are fixed for that hour. The exposition will be ready.

In the evening, motion pictures will show President Roosevelt in an address of good wishes, pressing a button that will turn on the exposition lights, greatest collection of lights ever gathered together anywhere at any time.

A little later another "talking movie" will present Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt congratulating Chicago and the country on the wonderful exposition and pressing a button that will turn on the fountain in the North Lagoon, a great enclosed body of water borrowed from Lake Michigan.

As a good American interested in "biggest" things you will want to know, this, by far the biggest fountain in the world, will be lighted by the greatest lighting system ever devised. The fountain throws into the air one hundred thousand gallons of water every minute, enough water for a city of 150,000 families, flooded with enough electric light to illuminate a city of a million.

You must not fail to see that fountain and the marvelously instructive "Century of Progress" Exposition.

When you enter the exposition you walk three miles looking in one direction. You walk back three miles looking in the other direction. You cross the lagoon on a bridge, or sail over it in a dizzy aerial transportation contrivance, walk a few more miles. Then you have seen THE OUTSIDE OF THE EXPOSITION.

Seeing the INSIDE, the marvels instructive, amusing, amazing and astounding, collected from all over the world, will keep you busy all summer and the end of the summer will find you writing to Rufus Dawes, president of the great enterprise, and his brother, General Dawes, who started the idea and fought for it, "Please keep this open a third year, I haven't seen half of it."

No intelligent American should fail to see the exposition in which Chicago courageously, in the depth of depression, has glorified the achievements of a "Century of Progress."

IN ANCIENT days big buildings were sometimes castles in which robber barons lived. Sometimes, a little later, they were large prisons. Now, in American cities, thank heaven, the big buildings are public libraries and public schools.

And in the "Century of Progress" Exposition the biggest buildings are appropriately AUTOMOBILE BUILDINGS, the automobile being the greatest addition to human happiness in the whole "Century of Progress."

At the edge of the lake stands the gigantic General Motors Building, where you may see a complete automobile take shape, under your very eyes, as amazingly and almost as quickly as the animals, behemoth and others, took shape in the Garden of Eden long ago.

At one end you see almost nothing in the way of materials starting "down the line," a little later you see that "almost nothing" run off under its power a completely finished automobile.

JUST ACROSS the road is Walter Chrysler's automobile building, its modernistic strange towers climbing up toward the sky, painted many strange colors, showing all the different kinds of cars that Walter Chrysler entreats you to test before you buy any other.

And next is the giant building that Henry Ford has just completed, nine hundred feet long, a complete exposition of transportation and of machinery through the ages, besides being a Henry Ford exposition.

You realize what men can do when permitted to work as they please, without anybody to tell them what to do, when to start, when to stop, when to eat, and when to say their prayers. That building covering many acres has been built within two months, in addition to the Ford Park on the edge of the lake across the way. The little wooden barn, in which Henry Ford made his first experiments, in days before he could say, "I usually keep three or four hundred million dollars cash on hand," will interest young and old inventors. There is a great deal in a good idea if you stick to it.

THE "CENTURY OF PROGRESS" Exposition among the many "biggest things on earth" includes the biggest automobile ever made shown by the Studebaker Company. This automobile, which boys and girls and older folks will want to see, is eighty feet long, thirty-nine feet high and contains a complete motion picture house, fireproof, where you see pictures telling the story of Studebaker greatness.

You will be unjust to yourself and your family if you fail to see Chicago's "Century of Progress" Exposition this summer.

Millions coming in from the farms and cities, too, will gaze through thick plate glass at cheerful cows, clean as a dinner plate, in a silver plated enclosure fence, milked by electricity. They belong to the Brook Hill Dairy. If you like to go far back in thought you might see your primitive ances-

FORMER QUEEN VICTORIA

COUPLE TO ASK ANNULMENT

MADRID, May 24. — (AP.) — The newspaper La Libertad, today published a report from France that former King Alfonso XIII is planning annulment of his marriage to the former Queen Victoria.

It is stated that the couple would ask the Pope for an annulment shortly.

At the same time, the newspaper El Sol published a dispatch from Paris saying that Alfonso's son Juan, will soon announce his engagement to Princess Maria, the youngest daughter of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy.

PARIS, May 24.—(AP.)—Close friends of former King Alfonso and former Queen Victoria of Spain said today that there was a foundation for rumors that the royal couple wish an annulment.

VATICAN CITY, May 24—(AP.)—Church prelates today termed a report in Spanish newspapers that former King Alfonso and former Queen Victoria of Spain were seeking an annulment of their marriage as "ridiculous."

These authorities said the reports indicated a confused conception of church law which only grants annulments for the gravest moral and spiritual reasons—reasons which were said not to exist in the case of the royal Spanish couple.

New Cut in Prices Of State Rum Seen

HARRISBURG, May 24.—(AP.)—Robert S. Gawthrop, chairman of the State Liquor Control Board, says he has "nothing definite" on which to base his hopes, but he believes prices of liquor at state stores can be cut again.

In any event, he said yesterday, there will be no price increase even if Pennsylvania should have to pay $900,000 in federal taxes on liquor which was in storage at the time the levy went into effect.

TROOPS HURL TEAR GAS IN STRIKE

Hand Grenades Fly In Battle at Toledo Plant

TOLEDO, O., May 24—(AP)—Fresh violence broke out at the Electric Auto-Lite Company plant here today when strikers and sympathizers began throwing rocks at Ohio National Guardsmen and the guards responded with a tear gas barrage.

The jeering, cursing crowd which pushed forward at several street intersections snatched up several grenades before they exploded, and threw them back at the unmasked militiamen.

Two gas barrages had been discharged during the morning by soldiers when crowds refused to disperse, but the rock throwing and more serious disturbances did not begin until after noon.

Behind the guardsmen's gas squads were ominous-looking machine gun emplacements, manned by grim troopers ready to open fire should life be endangered or the crowd get completely out of control.

GAS ROUTS BABY

Warrants for the arrest of C. O. Miniger, president of the Electric Auto-Lite Company, and J. Arthur Minch, vice president, were issued here today on affidavits made by John J. Flynn, charging the company officials with maintaining a public nuisance.

Flynn swore out the warrant after he said his home, which is across the street from the Auto-Lite plant, had been filled with tear gas from bombs thrown from the plant during the rioting yesterday, driving out Flynn's wife and infant daughter.

Desultory rioting continued as 700 troops of rifle and machine gun companies released the employes and escorted them to safety.

CROWD GROWS UGLIER

The crowd kept getting larger and uglier as the day advanced and the weather cleared. It seemed evident that a prolonged chilling rain early today, rather

Schwab Quitting Post With Steel Institute

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP.)—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute, today announced his intention of tendering his resignation from the steel institute.

The Bethlehem chairman told members of the institute that if the steel industry's current operating rate of 55 per cent of capacity can be continued, the price scheduled for the third quarter will permit most steel companies "to earn something on their investment."

He declared that the time had arrived to remove all barriers to natural and normal employment and that "certain legislation" should be modified, referring particularly to the securities act.

The veteran steel master declared:

"It is a time for good cheer and clear thinking. The American public has found a channel to future prosperity. Over the last year we have witnessed a steady march toward recovery.

"Our industry has given complete co-operation to President Roosevelt in his efforts to bring about recovery and I am confident that the administration recognizes that the time has now arrived to allow business and industry to proceed under the fullest measure of self-government."

REVEAL HUGE LOSS IN BANK ASSETS

Political Leaders Cited As Borrowers at Penna. Trust Co.

Leaders, powerful in both Republican and Democratic politics of Allegheny County and Pennsylvania, borrowed hundreds of thousands of dollars from the closed Pennsylvania Trust Company on notes an appraisal on file today shows.

Such names as Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic candidate for United States Senate; Roy D. Schooley, former city treasurer; Walter Bonitz, reputed "financial angel" for the Francis Shunk Brown campaign for governor; Joseph Engelsberg and many others pepper the inventory and appraisal of the bank filed today.

Because of bad loans losses in securities and other investments, the bank's assets have shrunk from the book value of $3,824,381 to $1,125,758, it is set forth in the appraisal made by Oliver P. Nicola and W. S. Linderman.

VALUES SHRINK

The appraisals are based on the book value of the loans as of the date the bank closed, but many of the loans have been considerably reduced since that time, according to banking authorities.

Bonitz, who became a director in the bank a short while before it closed, obtained a $100,000 loan for his Crescent Brick Company. The company's unsecured note is now listed at $8,001.26.

Bonitz also borrowed $43,500, putting up Crescent Brick Company stock as security. This note is appraised at $133.

James H. Duff, another director, had a $47,820 loan, which is appraised at $1,218.

Duff had obtained other large loans for a land company in which he is interested, and these loans are appraised at their book value.

Page also indorsed two notes for Floyd E. Clinton, former treasurer of the bank, totaling $10,065 and now appraised at $1 each.

In addition, Clinton had notes

Graham charged in his opening address to the jury today in the trial of the Senator and 11 others for alleged vote frauds in the 1932 congressional election.

A jury was selected to try State Senator James J. Coyne this afternoon—a jury of 12 men who promised to ignore the charges that Mayor McNair had tried to intimidate a government witness into testifying in Coyne's favor.

Each of the jurors was asked by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, at the request of defense counsel:

"Have you read one or more recent newspaper articles in which James P. Bailey charged that Mayor McNair and Theodore L. Moritz sought to intimidate him by suggesting his testimony be changed in one or more aspects?"

Of the panel of 2 prospective jurors, 12 said they had read newspaper pieces, but all the jurors accepted promised they would banish the thought when they came to reach a verdict.

While all this was going on Senator Coyne, who appeared in

HOUSE NEARS VOTE ON BILLION DOLLAR AID TO DEPOSITORS

M'LEOD LEADS FIGHT FOR PAYOFF

Seeks to Force Poll On Own Bill Despite Substitute Offered

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(INS.) — With the House reported ready to authorize the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to use $1,000,000,000 in freeing deposits in closed banks, Representative Clarence McLeod (Rep.), of Michigan, today launched a fight to make such action mandatory on the corporation.

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Passage of the administration bank guaranty extension bill, which includes an amendment authorizing a potential $1,000,000,000 to free closed bank deposits, was planned in the House today.

Members were warned by Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic leader, they will be held in session all night, if necessary, to complete the bill.

The measure, sponsored to continue temporary bank deposit insurance and postpone the effective date of the permanent guaranty plan until July 1, 1935, brought the issue of aid to bank depositors to the floor for the first time.

While administration leaders have opposed legislation to this effect, they expect the House to approve the Steagall-Brown depositors' aid amendment to the guaranty bill.

M'LEOD BATTLE

A battle was promised by backers of the McLeod bill to pay off depositors in closed banks 100 per cent, to make the amendment more effective.

It would authorize the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to purchase assets of closed banks or make loans on them at normal instead of depression values, and provides means of putting a billion dollars into the effort.

"If this amendment were changed to make this relief mandatory it would accomplish great results."

So said Representative McLeod (Rep.), of Michigan, author of the McLeod bill to have the RFC take over assets of closed banks and reimburse depositors in full.

FIGHTS FOR VOTE

While supporting the provision but urging its expansion, McLeod hopes to force a vote on his own bill. The petition for a vote has been signed by 137 members.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, would continue the temporary bank deposit insurance for one year and raise the amount insured from $2,500 to $5,000. It would postpone the effective date of the permanent system from July 1, 1934, to July 1, 1935.

Capital of the FDIC would be raised to more than $2,000,000,000 by authorizing issuance of debentures five times the capital stock. The obligations would be guaranteed by the Treasury.

PROVISION REPEALED

The measure also repeals the provision in the permanent guarantee law requiring state banks to become members of the Federal Reserve System by July 1, 1936, in order to remain in the guaranty plan, and does not authorize the Federal Reserve Board to erect a building here as does the Senate bill.

The latest signers of the McLeod petition included Cavicchia (Rep.), New Jersey; Kniffin (Dem.), Ohio; Carpenter (Dem.), Nebraska; Burke (Dem.), California; Granfield (Dem.), Massachusetts, and Frear (Rep.), Wisconsin.

totaling approximately $54,000 and appraised at approximately $6,000.

Benjamin Page himself had notes listed in the following amounts: $14,116; $10,500; $10,005; $6,030; $5,000 and $4,384.

WORTH ESTIMATED

While the appraisal indicates a decrease in the value of the notes, it does not necessarily follow that the notes are worth only $51 or as little as the appraisers' estimate.

Benjamin L. Steinberg, a former city solicitor, has five notes, totaling $10,855, and appraised at $1 each.

Elmer Whitehill has a note indorsed by Earl F. Reed, former special counsel to the government in the federal vote fraud cases, for $2,000. It is appraised at $1.

INDUSTRY LOAN CUT BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP.)—A plan to make half a billion dollars or so available for government loans to industry headed today toward a conference between the House and Senate.

The House passed the bill late yesterday, but in much different form from the measure approved earlier by the Senate.

The Senate had set the maximum at $530,000,000. The House, besides other major differences, determined on a $440,000,000 figure. It also tacked on a provision allowing loans totaling $75,000,000 to school districts for teachers' pay and other things.

Representative Luce (Rep.), of Massachusetts, said this would benefit only Chicago and was "just a gold brick" to other sections.

COUNTESS ASKS RYAN TO PAY

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Countess Marie-Anne von Wurmbrand-Stuppach will demand $25,000 a year alimony pending disposition of the annulment suit brought by her husband, Clendenin J. Ryan, Jr., it was learned today.

Attorney Nathan Burkan is representing the 20-year-old Viennese noblewoman in her fight against charges of fraud made by Ryan, who is secretary to Mayor La Guardia and grandson of Thomas Fortune Ryan, traction magnate. The lawyer said he realized Ryan could not pay $25,000 alimony out of his $4,000 city salary, but remarked:

"He can borrow it."

Eventually Ryan will come into approximately $9,000,000 from the estate of his grandfather.

The Countess was engaged one month last summer to Baron Buxhoeveden of Germany. In August she was engaged, also for one month, to Count Vladimir Mitrovsky of Poland. She said today:

"Of course I loved Count Mitrovsky. I loved him so much at one time that I broke my engagement to the Baron. There's nothing to hide about it. I told Clen."

SENATE FACES 12-HOUR DAY OVER TARIFF

Rumors of Filibuster Bring Threat From Robinson

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP.)—By a threat to put the Senate on a 12-hour working day, the Democratic leadership sought today to squelch any attempt at a filibuster against the tariff bargaining bill.

Rumors reached Majority Leader Robinson that one or two members were "trying to perfect an organization for a filibuster."

He said he was prepared to bring pressure to end any such move speedily by prolonging daily sessions. He said:

"If that is the intention we will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning and stay until 8 o'clock at night. And if that doesn't work we'll come here at 9 a. m. and stay till the same hour in the evening."

Minority leader McNary said "none of the fellows" on the Republican side was involved in an embryo filibuster. He declared they were ready to vote as soon as general debate ended.

Indications today were that the final vote would not be taken till next week, despite a possible Saturday session.

The Democratic leadership objected yesterday to a Republican's demand for a peek at the trade agreement negotiated by the State Department with Colombia last December.

Senator Hatfield (Rep.), of West Virginia, offered a resolution calling on the department to furnish the Senate with a copy. He said he had reason to believe it was negotiated to aid American oil and fruit interests with large holdings in Colombia.

Salesmen Win Tardy NRA Hearing

WASHINGTO, May 24.—(AP.)—After countless attempts to get NRA to do something for them, the traveling salesmen of the country will get a hearing today, not on a specific code, but on the possibility of establishing provisions to improve their standard in all industries.

Samuel Untermeyer, New York attorney, will be chief spokesman for the salesmen who, to their sorrow, have received from the 430 approved codes only one thing: The phrase "excepting outside salesmen" tacked on every provision giving minimum wages and maximum hours to other classes of help.

NRA Fails to Adopt Insurance Code

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP.)—NRA announced yesterday it had decided no code was necessary for the insurance business and that, putting aside codes that have been proposed by insurance groups, it would allow them to continue under the President's reemployment agreement.

This was the first time NRA had refused to adopt a code for any industrial group.

DARROW REPORT ATTACKED BY LABOR

Board Members Clash; Johnson, Chief Critic Take Auto Ride

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP.)—Pot-shooting between friends and foes of NRA went merrily on today as Clarence Darrow's National Review Board sought to surmount internal dissensions and wind up its work.

Darrow and Hugh S. Johnson, opponents in a first-class denunciation match three days ago, took a leisurely automobile drive together late yesterday, but about all that could be learned of their conversation was that it dealt with historical topics.

A furious attack from organized labor, labeling the Darrow Board's report "a disservice to the nation and its citizens in a time of great economic stress," added to the board's troubles as it tackled the preparation of its second report regarding small business and the NRA codes.

The Darrow group, already poitned for extinction by President Roosevelt at the end of the month, also suffered an internal explosion which threatened for a time to cause its immediate dissolution.

William O. Thompson, a member of the board, accused Lowell Mason, the board's counsel, of tampering with the records. There were remarks about Mason's one-time connection with the Samuel Insull interests. One thing led to another, resulting in an abrogation of speaking terms among several members of the board.

Before his auto ride with Darrow, Gen. Johnson had conferred a long while with President Roosevelt over plans for remodeling many NRA processes, designed to eliminate the causes of some of the existing complaints. Johnson appeared pleased at the outcome, but announcements of the new policies were held in abeyance.

MISS JOYCE AT COURT

HARRIMAN JURY HEARS PEGGY

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP.)—Peggy Hopkins Joyce—dressed in gray tailored suit and wearing an orchid—played a new role yesterday, that of a witness against gray-haired Joseph W. Harriman, charged with falsifying records of the closed Harriman National Bank.

Accompanied by a maid and a lawyer, the much-married platinum blonde was called to testify she had not authorized any officer of the bank to charge her account $34,375 in April, 1932, for the purchase of Harriman bank stock.

Miss Joyce, whose appearances in divorce courts have been frequent, seemed a bit puzzled by the procedure.

A clerk had to show her the way to the witness stand. She paused before responding as he swore her in. Then, she flashed him a beaming smile. Constance Talmadge, the movie actress, who preceded Miss Joyce as a witness a few days ago, had walked directly to the stand.

NRA Code Rules Summer Resorts

HARRISBURG, May 24.—(INS.)—Because the NRA hotel code provides a full day off for women employes, the state industrial board today suspended the regulation permitting summer resorts and small hotels to give women employes two half days off each week.

Members of the board took the position that they should not permit a standard lower than that prescribed by the NRA.

Roosevelt Names Thorp's Successor

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today nominated Claudius T. Murchison, of the University of North Carolina, to be director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

State Department Advisor Found Dead

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(Universal)—Dr. George B. Roorbach, 56, special adviser to Assistant Secretary of State Sayre, was found dead yesterday in his hotel room.

Dr. Roorbach, who was advising Sayre on financial matters, was taken suddenly ill Monday and went to his hotel. Attendants found him dead in his bed.

STEEL LEADER ASSAILS UNIONS

'Professional' Groups Attacked by Girdler; Weir Speaks

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP.)—Tom M. Girdler, chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, expressed strong opposition to dealing with "professional unions" before 1,300 members of the American Iron and Steel Institute today.

Girdler said he would "raise apples and potatoes" on his farm before he would "spend the rest of my life dealing with John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers."

The company union plan has worked to the benefit of employes, according to Girdler. He told the meeting:

"If anyone thinks he is going to get any temporary advantage by fooling around with a professional union, I wish he would get it out of his head. Whatever advantage he'd get would be temporary."

He said he would not recognize the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of any other professional union "even if we have to shut down." He said:

"If we have to shut down our mills, they will not stay shut down very long."

WEIR SPEAKS

Mr. Girdler blamed "bright young men" in the industry who have been trying to "beat" the steel code for whatever trouble has occurred. The chief leaders in the industry have made serious efforts to co-operate for the benefit of the employes.

Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, whose dispute with the administration on the NRA attracted wide attention, urged adherence to the principles and ideals of the industry. He said that solution of the problems of the steel industry could be only through co-operation.

Second quarter business of the steel industry was described by Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, as the best it has had in a long time. But new business, he said, is not quite supporting the present rate of production.

Albert C. Lehman, president of the Blaw-Knox Company, expressed the view that while the NRA was not perfect it deserved commendation and should be encouragd along sane lines. He said:

"I feel that America is slowly but surely emerging from depression. Improvement we are witnessing has to a great extent been stimulated by the actions of the government."

Guardsmen with fixed bayonets at the border of the restricted area met with a constant stream of abuse from the crowd. As automobiles bearing non-strikers were stopped for identification, shouts of "Scab!" and "Dirty rat!" grew in intensity, along with:

"Get his number. We'll take care of him tonight."

Six soldiers were reported to have received minor injuries when they were hit by the rocks. The crowd was driven back by 50 militiamen who advanced with fixed bayonets preceded by a gas detail.

Oil Code 'Teeth' Urged By Sinclair Official

"Teeth" for the NRA code of the oil industry were urged by J. E. Dyer, regional chairman under the oil marketing code, in addressing the American Petroleum Institute in its mid-year meeting here.

The industry has made definite progress under the code, Dyer, an official of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation, said. He cited as indications of progress the elimination of the practice of loaning, leasing and giving away dispensing equipment, stopping of indiscriminate extension of credit, and ending the offering of costly inducements in solicitation of business.

Dyer urged legal support and enforcement of code provisions, advocating particularly control of production. He called for decisive action against code violators.

Axtell J. Byles, president of the institute, yesterday advocated a general manufacturers' sales tax to relieve the industry of a huge burden and for the benefit of the entire nation. He described the sales tax as "the answer to the taxation problem."

The institute's board of directors discussed the Disney bill providing federal control of oil production, but took no action either for or against the bill.

The motor car of tomorrow was described by A. Ludlow Clayden, Sun Oil Company, of Philadelphia. He said it would have a smaller engine located in the rear of the car, extreme stream lines, independent springing of all four wheels, and hydraulic clutch.

New York Banishes High-Priced Casino

NEW YORK, May 24.—(Universal)—The Central Park Casino, nocturnal rendezvous of the elite where sandwiches are a dollar each and ham and eggs cost $1.50, has been ordered off city property.

Insurance for Jobless And NRA Changes Urged

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP.)—Recommendations for overhauling NRA minimum wage provisions, for creating a national unemployment insurance system, and for setting up independent labor and consumers' boards, were submitted to President Roosevelt in a statement made public last night by nearly 200 lawyers, educators, editors, ministers and social workers.

Oswald Garrison Villard, contributing editor of The Nation, said a group had presented the recommendations to the President on April 29, and that some signatures had been added later. The document said in part:

"We believe that the acid test of the new deal lies in its effect on the actual distribution of the wealth which the machine age creates but which we have yet to find the way to spread out and use.

"We recommend that a prime charge of the present Congress should be the creation of a labor board in the United States Department of Labor with full power to safeguard the right of workers to organize and bargain through representatives of their own choosing.

HUNDREDS VIEW SHOT-RIDDLED BODIES

Ranger Asserts Outlaw And Girl Had Chance To Surrender

ARCADIA, La., May 24.—(AP.)—Society wrote "finis" today to the criminal careers of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker—but two mothers mourned the loss of a wayward son and daughter.

Gov. O. K. Allen, of Louisiana, congratulated the six officers who ambushed and killed Barrow and his quick-shooting woman companion yesterday. A Coroner's inquest held the officers did their duty.

The bodies of Barrow and Bonnie Parker—riddled with buckshot—were laid out in Dallas awaiting burial tomorrow.

RELATIVES RELIEVED

The prayer of the mother of Barrow, ruthless killer, that she might see her son once more alive was not fulfilled as officers, led by the relentless man-hunter, Frank Hamer, former Texas Ranger, put an end to his bloody trial.

The mother of Bonnie Parker fainted when told of the death of her daughter.

While the two mothers were inconsolable, other relatives and friends of the two slain bandits expressed relief at their end. Most of them agreed that their deaths by officers' gunfire were better than being taken alive.

BETRAYED BY FRIEND

Barrow and his cigar-smoking companion were brought down by a tip to officers from an erstwhile friend, who lured them into a trap. The pair thought they were going to join friends when they were suddenly attacked and riddled with 50 bullets before they could raise their guns as they sped along a road a few miles south of here. This tipster will receive $2,500 reward offered for the man and woman bandits "dead or alive."

The bodies of the murderous pair were brought in their automobile to this town, where they were laid out in an undertaking establishment and a curious public allowed to parade by to view the riddled corpses.

The parade of the public was not ended until Barrow's father and brother arrived from Dallas in two ambulances to claim the bodies. Officers heeded the plea of the father to stop the line of the curious.

NO ALTERNATIVE

Hamer said he hated having to shoot a woman, especially while she was sitting down, but it was either her's or the officers' lives at stake. He said the officers gave them a chance to surrender before firing, but when they elected to fight they had no other course except to shoot.

Barrow, charged with 12 murders and more robberies, had been hunted for months by Hamer and a staff of assistants assigned to this duty alone.

Bonnie Parker, who joined Barrow in his late crimes and stood by his side with a belching gun as he fought with officers, was also sought by the law.

The pair had been trailed 15,000 miles over a half dozen states. They managed to elude arrest or shoot their way out of ambushes until they ran into the trap yesterday.

SAXOPHONE WITH GUNS

The woman was identified by a tattoo on the thigh. She wore two diamond rings, a wrist watch and a cross around her neck under her dress. She was clad in a red dress, red shoes and had on a red and white hat.

Barrow had been wearing colored glasses, one lens of which was shot out. He had $507 on his person.

In the car in which the two came to their ignoble end was a vertible arsenal of machine guns, rifles, pistols and ammunition. Nestled among the weapons was a saxophone and sheets of music.

Separate burials will be held for the man and woman who had been inseparable in recent months. Barrow's mother objected to double services. Barrow will be buried beside his brother, Marvin, who was fatally wounded in a fight with police near Dexter, Ia., last July.

Slain Gunwoman's Mate Glad She Died

HOUSTON, Tex., May 24.—(AP.)—Roy Thornton, 25, convict husband of Bonnie Parker, wily gunwoman who was slain with Clyde Barrow near Arcadia, La., yesterday, is glad his wife died as she did. He said:

"I'm glad they went out like they did. It was better than getting caught."

Bonnie, In Recent Writing, Pictured Fall With Barrow

International News Service.

ARCADIA, La., May 24.—Bonnie Parker, the girl who smoked big black cigars and wrote bad poetry, and her desperado lover, Clyde Barrow, had a premonition that they would meet sudden and violent ends.

Relatives of the long-hunted pair, who were shot and killed by four quick shooting Texas officers and a Louisiana sheriff and his deputy early yesterday, said today that Bonnie and Barrow had often predicted just such a death as they encountered.

Only a few months ago, the 23-year-old Bonnie penned these lines in her last poetic effusion:

"Some day they will go down together,
And they will bury them side by side;
To a few it means grief, to the law it's relief,
But it's death to Bonnie and Clyde."

Then there was another time when she wrote:

"They know they are not too tough or desperate,
They know the law always wins;
They have been shot at before,
But they do not ignore that death was the wages of sin."

SOCIAL DISEASE FIGHT BEGUN

The first of a series of hearings for the purpose of determining the prevalence of "social diseases" in Allegheny County will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Community Fund Building, Smithfield street, under the auspices of the General Health Council.

Representatives of the council will meet with representatives of the Public Health Nursing Association, which maintains 19 health stations throughout the county.

The series of hearings is for the purpose of laying a groundwork for the drive against social diseases.

Dr. R. R. Jones, president of the council, today declared that some definite factual, first-hand information must be obtained as a basis for coping with the local situation. He revealed that Pennsylvania is one of the only two states in the union in which infectious social diseases need not be reported to health authorities.

Martin Insull Loses Fight Against Trial

AUDITOR ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

Missing since Tuesday afternoon, Harry Cruesch, 40, a Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation auditor, formerly of Mt. Lebanon, was found dead yesterday in his automobile, near Wildwood, with a bullet wound in his head and a revolver in his hand. A Coroner's report pronounced the death a suicide.

A brother-in-law, E. W. Lowry, of Wildwood, with whom Cruesch had been spending his vacation, said Cruesch had been worried about investments he had made. A note near the body directed the finder to Lowry's residence. Cruesch recently had been transferred to Aliquippa.

FIGHTS DIVORCE IN MEXICO

An injunction to restrain her husband from getting a Mexican divorce was sought by Mrs. Elizabeth Leiding, 818 Walnut street, Edgewood, against Elmer C. Leiding, an electrical draftsman, today.

The bill, filed by Attorney Arthur I. Zeiger, accuses Leiding of lavishing most of his income on "another woman" and of planning to marry her if he obtains a decree from his present wife, with whom he has lived for 31 years.

Mrs. Leiding charges that her husband has refused to support her properly and will abandon her support entirely if he obtains the Mexican decree.

RACE TO SAVE WRITER'S LIFE TURNS TO SEA

International News Service.

ABOARD FISHING VESSEL SANTA CRUZ, Tagus Cove, Galapogos Islands, May 24.—The United States Navy's dramatic race to save the life of William A. Robinson, American author and traveller stricken with acute appendicitis in this remote corner of the Pacific, shifted suddenly today from the air to the sea.

Two Navy surgeons, arriving here last night after a clock-like 12-hour flight in speedy naval seaplanes from Balboa, Canal Zone, nearly 1,000 miles away, decided Robinson was too ill to be operated upon either aboard his 32-foot ketch Svaap or aboard this fishing vessel, anchored nearby.

BRIDE WINS PRAISE

Consequently they urged that the destroyer Hale, which already was speeding here from Balboa, continue with all haste to the stricken writer, and he will be placed aboard and rushed to a hospital, probably at Balboa, for the serious major operation necessary.

The surgeons, meanwhile, praised very highly the brave, tireless patience with which the author's wife, the former Florence Crane, Chicago heiress, had maintained a constant vigil at the patient's bedside since he was stricken last Sunday morning.

'TELL THEM TO HURRY'

It was she who, after having flagged this vessel, directed the radio appeals which brought the American Navy into action to save her husband.

In response to her pleas, immediate help was forthcoming in the form of radio messages from a Los Angeles hospital directing treatment, which mainly was the application of ice packs to lessen pain and check development of the illness.

Then, as the two Naval planes and the destroyers were speeding here yesterday, Mrs. Robinson had the Santa Cruz radio operator flash out three successive messages, timed only a half hour apart:

"Patient losing strength. Cannot talk above whisper."

FETCHIT YAWNS GREETING HERE

The last word in swank, Stepin Fetchit, Negro comedian, dancer and "laziest" man on the screen, yawned sleepily today as he stepped from a plane at County Airport for a couple drowsy stretches before continuing his flight from Hollywood to New York.

Dessed in a black and white checkered suit, with long-tailed coat, a wide-striped Ascot tie in the same colors, pearl grey vest and hat to match, Fetchit will show New York's Harlem just how Hollywood's Beau Brummels dress.

Fetchit, whose real name is Lincoln Perry, is carrying greetings from Hollywood stars—and several checks—to the annual benefit for the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

The flight from Hollywood, he said, was sort of a warmup for a non-stop flight from New York to Africa. A bit vague about the details, he yawned:

"You know, like Lindbergh—only I'm goin' to Africa."

SCULPTORS QUIT CLASS TO WED

When John H. Nicholson, Jr., and Miss Margot Muehleisen march up to the altar, the god of sculpture will no doubt smile serenely.

The well known East End couple, who both withdrew from the art department at Carnegie Tech last week, took out a marriage license yesterday.

Miss Muehleisen has won national recognition as a sculptress and is at present planning the sculptural designs for the German Renaissance Room in the Cathedral of Learning. Two of her works are now on exhibition at Carnegie Institute.

Mr. Nicholson was formerly assistant curator of the paleontology department at the institute and has been studying sculpture at Carnegie Tech for the last two years.

He is a graduate of Staunton Military Academy, Virginia, and is the son of John H. Nicholson, former vice president of the National Tube Company.

Refusing to admit her coming marriage as the result of a campus romance, Miss Muehleisen said she has known her fiance for several years as a neighbor. He lives at 1515 Shady avenue. She resides with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Muehleisen, at 1519 Asbury place.

The prospective bride is a native of Munich, German, and came to this country several years before she entered Carnegie Tech.

SLAIN GUNMAN'S ERRAND HERE MYSTERY

Philadelphia Mobster Was 'Musciling in,' Police Believe

Federal authorities and police today sought to penetrate the wall of secrecy surrounding gangland activities and learn, if possible, what "business" brought Morris (Big George) Kaufmann, 34, Philadelphia gangster, to Pittsburgh and his death.

Whatever his plans for "muscling in" or associating himself in local rackets, Kaufmann's overtures were answered with pistol fire. Two bullet holes in the head, his body was found yesterday, thrown behind a boulder in a vacant lot in Covode street in the Squirrel Hill section.

KNOWN AS GANGSTER

Known to police as a notorious machine gunner, reputed member of the Meadows Mob of Philadelphia, Kaufmann was sought in the recent wounding of another gangster's girl friend, and in connection with three murders, several mail robberies, a bank holdup and numerous hi-jackings.

Search in Pittsburgh today centered on a mysterious brief case and a gladstone bag, carried by Kaufmann, when he checked out of the Fairfax Hotel Tuesday night and for another room he is believed to have rented.

Philadelphia police were seeking for questioning a young woman with whom he is known to have lived in a boarding house there until six weeks ago.

FAIL TO FIND CAR

Search of the county's garages, parking lots and back streets failed to reveal the automobile which Kaufmann's sister, Nan Dodson, of Philadelphia, told police he drove to Pittsburgh.

Kaufmann was wanted in Philadelphia for, among other things, the shooting there recently of Mrs. Eleonora Gooslyn Fontaine, girl friend of George Phillips, Washington racketeer, slain recently at the capital. He was thought also to be involved in that slaying.

Meanwhile, the dapper gangster's body awaited cremation. His sister wired police the family is without funds. The auto, if found, will be sold to meet funeral expenses. To that end, also, $51 found in his pockets will be devoted.

LONG CRIME RECORD

Kaufmann's police record extends over a long period. As a mere youngster, in 1916, he was arrested for disorderly conduct and larceny and spent three months in the Philadelphia House of Correction.

Police records show 10 arrests, mostly for robbery, burglary and carrying concealed weapons, but in most cases he was freed. In 1927 he was sentenced from Norristown to a four-to-eight year sentence in Eastern Penitentiary on those three charges.

And many other charges—federal and state—for which he had never been apprehended were pending against him.

2 ROME FLIERS AGAIN DOWN

International News Service.

CARDIFF, Wales, May 24.—George R. Pond and Cesare Sabelli, American aviators, arrived here at 1:05 p. m. (8:05 a. m. E. D. T.) after a flight from Port Talbot, Wales. They had been forced down at Port Talbot earlier by engine trouble after a flight from Baldonnel Field, Dublin.

The aviators intend to remain here until necessary repairs are made to permit continuation of their projected flight to Rome.

The engine of the plane, which had developed the same trouble that almost brought it to disaster in the flight from New York to Lahinch, on the coast of the Irish Free State, where Pond and Sabelli were forced down more than a week ago, belched black fumes as it landed here. Faulty oil pumps were held responsible for the engine's trouble.

Several days may be required to complete necessary repairs.

French Air Aces Pay Thaw Tribute

LE BOURGET, France, May 24.—(AP.)—The crack 54th Aviation Regiment yesterday honored the memory of the late Lieut. Col. William Thaw II, chief of the Lafayette Escadrille, who died April 22 in Pittsburgh.

Gen. Barres, chief of the French air staff, paid tribute to Thaw before friends and United States military attaches.

Police Riddling Barrow Remember Slain Pals

International News Service.

ARCADIA, La., May 24.—Texas Highway Patrolman B. M. Gault today described to International News Service the manner in which Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, long-sought outlaws, were shot and killed here yesterday.

Gault was one of the six Texas and Louisiana peace officers who ambushed Barrow and his sweetheart.

Barrow's car, Gault said, came up an incline toward the waiting posses at a speed of approximately 40 miles an hour. The car continued on for about 40 feet after an order to halt had been given Barrow by one of the officers.

Capt. Frank Hamer, who was in command of the Texas officers, urged the men to shoot slowly, but accurately, Gault declared.

He quoted Capt. Hamer as saying the memory of the murder of two Texas highway patrolmen by Barrow and Bonnie on Easter Sunday flashed into his consciousness as he opened fire.

All of the shots centered in the front of the car and about 15 bullets struck Barrow and about 40 Bonnie, Gault said.

Barrow was driving the car without shoes. The fugitives had about $500 on their persons.

Confucius Law Broken By Child on Stand

SEATTLE, May 24.—(AP.)—A commandment of Confucius was broken by six-year-old Lillian Kanae in telling a jury she saw her father, Sam Kanae, Chinese-Hawaiian, shoot Jim Puho, Hawaiian. Kanae is on trial here on a charge of second degree murder.

Twenty-five hundred years ago, Confucius said to Meng Yi, a disciple:

"If the father steals a sheep the child screens the father. There is uprightness in this. It is the child's duty to worship the father."

Lillian, who has never seen the rice fields of China, told the jury she, her father and Puho had eaten dinner together and her father and Puho washed the dishes afterwards, singing and laughing.

Then, she testified her father took out a pistol, and said:

"'A man is coming here and I am going to shoot him.'

"Daddy walked across the room and took nails from the bed and put them in his gun. Then he pointed the gun at 'im and fire came out of it. Jim walked to the bed and lay down."

She was asked:

"Do you like your father?"

Sam Kanae, squat and chunky, glanced uneasily around the courtroom, as the little girl said:

"No."

BRITAIN, JAPAN URGE NAVAL SURVEY

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP.)—The United States, GrGeat Britain and Japan were said authoritatively today to be engaged in preliminary conversations concerning the feasibility of holding discussions on naval questions prior to the Washington naval conference next year.

William Phillips, under-secretary of state, declined any official comment on the discussions, but it was understood the first overtures for an exploratory survey of naval questions came from Great Britain and Japan.

Japan, through official spokesmen, has announced on numerous occasions that she would demand a revision of the present 5-5-3 naval ratio established at the London and Washington conferences.

Japanese officials also have suggested that a preliminary discussion between the three nations on questions especially pertaining to the Pacific would go a long way toward clearing the atmosphere for the general conference.

Secretary Swanson said yesterday at his press conference that the United States would consider extending its naval bases in the Pacific if the Japanese insisted on increasing the ratio of their navy to that of this country.

The naval limitation treaties now in force expire in 1936.

Great Britain's great naval base at Singapore, American naval bases in the Philippines and Hawaii and changed political conditions in the Pacific all are expected to come before the conference if a program can be agreed upon.

League Court Decision Sought By Senate Bloc

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senate Democratic leaders have decided to make an effort before adjournment to have the Senate set a definite date for a vote next session on American adherence to the League of Nations Court.

After the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had agreed to start consideration next Monday of the court protocols, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader, announced:

"I believe the issue should be brought to a decision in the Senate.

"I do not believe we ought to consider the court protocols at this session. If that were done, it would cause long debate and delay adjournment.

"But I do think the Senate ought to fix a date on which the matter will be brought up at the next session."

Robinson disclosed he would move Monday to have the committee report out the court so the proposed voting agreement can be sought on the floor.

Opponents will vigorously fight all moves to resurrect the court and inject the issue into the Senate, already bogged down with domestic recovery efforts. They will also protest the proposal to set a date for voting next winter.

Senator George (Dem.), of Georgia, serving notice he would vote against reporting the court now, said:

"I believe it would be a futile gesture."

ARMS EMBARGO BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Chaco arms embargo bill was passed without opposition in the House yesterday after a stern warning against any "war-breeding alliance" with the League of Nations.

The measure, sponsored by the administration, authorizes President Roosevelt to forbid the sale of arms and munitions for export to Paraguay and Bolivia, now locked in a bloody jungle conflict.

Meanwhile the Senate Foreign Relations Committee unanimously approved the bill, which will be rushed through the upper House.

The warning of any "war-breeding alliance" with the League came from Representative Fish (Rep.), of New York, who supported the bill, but denounced earlier efforts by "internationalists" to involve the United States in a scheme to determine and act against an aggressor.

Fish, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee which reported the bill, vigorously assailed Norman H. Davis, ambassador-at-large, for his activities abroad, charging that Davis was misleading foreign governments by false promises of American support in case of a war threat.

Fish said:

"This bill is a useful measure, but the former effort to give the President authority to impose an embargo against a nation he considered the aggressor was dangerous and un-American.

"Such authority would destroy our traditional policy followed since 1793 and would be equivalent to membership in the League of Nations.

"It is time that the United States refused to pull chestnuts out of the fire for the rest of the world. Let us mind our own business. The only war we will declare is a war in defense of our country."

Carol to Place Rumania Under Military Rule

International News Service.

BUCHAREST, May 24.—King Carol is preparing to place Rumania under a military government similar to that imposed upon Bulgaria by King Boris last Saturday, International News Service learned this afternoon.

It is reported that in preparation for the coup the King's titian-haired companion, Mme. Magda Lupescu, for whom he left his wife, Princess Helen, has already left the country.

Her departure, it is said, was one of the conditions under which the veteran diplomat and soldier, Marshal Alexander Averescu, agreed to attempt to form a military cabinet.

Demands by the army for a non-party government have been increasing steadily in recent weeks, as they did in Bulgaria, and were accompanied, as in Bulgaria, by the growth of a strong Fascist movement.

Terror Bombings Resumed in Austria

SALZBURG, Austria, May 24.—(AP.)—Resumption of teroristic bombings last night in Salzburg and vicinity aroused the population to demand today from Chancellor Dollfuss that the entire police force be removed or replaced.

A bombing occurred in front of the archbishop's palace, damaging the building. Damage was done by an explosion to a Catholic mission at nearby Liefering.

WAR DEBTORS TO GET BILLS FROM U.S.

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Treasury and the State Department prepared last night to dispatch formal notice to 13 debtor nations that they will owe the United States about $175,000,000 on June 15.

Both departments flatly denied reports the notices had been held up pending President Roosevelt's debt message to Congress, or for any other purpose. The notices will go out within the next few days, it was learned.

Meanwhile, the President announced he will send his debt message to Capitol Hill soon. He is expected to make no recommendations for downward revision of debts.

France, next to Great Britain the largest debtor, yesterday joined the procession of nations which have presented their side of the debt question before the administration. Ambassador Andre de Laboulaye called on Undersecretary of State Phillips. Neither would comment on the discussions.

Another visitor at the State Department was the minister of Hungary, whose government will owe about $33,000 on June 15. Hungary is expected to default.

LONDON, May 24.—(INS.)—A British message on the subject of her debts to the United States will be sent to the United States government next Wednesday, it was learned today. It will be transmitted through the British embassy in Washington.

The message, it was learned, will be in the nature of a reply to the attitude on the debts question expressed by President Roosevelt to Sir Donald Lindsay, the British ambassador to Washington. It will be based on reports Sir Ronald has made of his conversations with the American President.

Archduke Eugene Returns to Austria

BASEL, Switzerland, May 24.—(AP.)—The Archduke Eugene, former field marshal of Austria, yesterday left his exile in Basel, where he has lived since the collapse of the Hapsburg dynasty, to return to Austria.

It was said he would go directly to Vienna, to which the present Austrian government has authorized his return.

Climb Pole to Fly Swastika in London

LONDON, May 24.—(AP.)—Members of "the Imperial League of Fascists" climbed the flagpole of the huge County Council Building today and affixed a big Union Jack with a swastika emblem on it.

This is "Empire Day," but the London County Council, a Socialist-controlled body, had decreed it as "Commonwealth Day." The flying of the flag, which was removed after six hours, was described as a protest against alleged Jewish influence in the County Council.

POLAND BANS 3 FILM FIRMS

WARSAW, May 24.—(AP.)—Indignant over what it interpreted as a slur on the national honor, the Polish government today prohibited three American film companies from showing any more of their motion pictures in Poland.

In two cases the companies gave two disreputable characters the family names of men who were heroes in the American Revolutionary War.

The picture, "The Life of Jimmy Dolan," depicts a dishonored Polish boxer with the name of Pulaski. In "How Many More Nights" a gangster named Kosciusko appears. The third picture which prompted the governmental action, "The Life of Ivar Kreuger," was regarded as reflecting unfavorably upon Poland.

American Creditors Ask German Stand

BERLIN, May 24—(AP)—Representatives of American creditors at the German debts transfer conference determined today upon a policy of drawing from Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, just where he stands and what he is prepared to do.

Hitherto Schacht has let others do the talking except to give a picture of Germany's situation, but he has offered no concrete suggestions or proposals.

MASARYK AGAIN HEADS CZECHS

PRAHA, May 24. — (AP.) — Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, who has been president of Czechoslovakia since the founding of the present government in 1918, was re-elected today for another seven-year term.

The election day was a national holiday and all Czechoslovakia honored the 84-year-old President in patriotic assemblies and carnivals as Senators and Deputies met to re-elect him.

President Masayrk was first chosen by the revolutionary assembly November 14, 1918. He was elected for a seven-year term in 1920 and re-elected in 1927. In today's balloting he received 327 out of 418 votes cast. There were 53 blank ballots and 38 votes cast for Clemens Gottwald, Communist editor and deputy.

DUCE PROCLAIMS ITALY 'READY'

ROME, May 24.—(AP.)—Italy is "ready for any eventuality" Premier Mussolini told half a million soldiers, blackshirts and Fascist youths crowded before the balcony of the Venezia Palace today on the anniversary of the nation's entrance into the World War. He shouted:

"Italy wishes peace, but is now ready for any eventuality."

He asked:

"Are you ready?"

A tremendous shout of "Yes" went up in answer.

COYNE, AIDES GO ON TRIAL

good humor despite a cold in the chest, lounged with friends and the other 11 Republicans defendants in the crowded corridors of the antiquated Federal Building. All are charged with a vote-stealing conspiracy at the November election of 1932.

The jury selected includes:

D. H. Baird, realtor, Altoona; George Conner, farmer, Dun Station, Greene County; John H. Eaton, retired, Beaver; J. W. Fleming, farmer, Saxonburg, Butler County; Harry Ferguson, farmer, Valencia, Butler County; John A. Kuhl, clerk, 5728 Walnut street; Fred Lewis, agent, Unity; Charles O. Minder, telegrapher, Rockwood, Somerset County; W. F. McVay, retired, Waynesburg; S. H. Robinson, inspector, Washington, Pa.; C. F. Stratten, retired, Strattenville, Clarion County; John W. Smith, 1214 Straka street, Corliss Station, Pittsburgh.

On trial with Coyne are Alderman John J. Verona, Third Ward leader; John Fugassi, long a voice in inner political circles; Patrick J. O'Malley, Republican chairman of the Strip's Second Ward; former Fire Captain Louis J. Conley, chairman of the Ninth Ward; Tom Coyne, the Senator's brother; Assemblyman Patrick J. Maloney; George W. Savage, former city assessor; Frank O'Halloran, deputy mercantile appraiser; Martin Mullen, Tenth Ward district chairman; Walter Butler, former district chairman of the Fourth Ward, and Harry Fink, private detective and former deputy constable for Verona.

The trial was held up a half hour while Judge Schoonmaker pondered the questions submitted by defense counsel.

Nine men rose when the jurors were polled on whether they had read any other newspaper articles about thec ase. All agreed they had not formed an opinion.

But when the court asked whether any of them had an opinion that would require contrary testimony to be wiped out, John Munnell, of Mercer County, stood up. Judge Schoonmaker excused him, at the request of defense counsel.

None of the jurors said he had formed any prejudice based on religion or politics.

NO WOMEN ON PANEL

Government Prosecutors James I. Marsh and Louis E. Graham selected the jury for the government. Attorneys Charles J. Margiotti and O. K. Eaton, two of the 11 defense lawyers, acted for the defendants.

There were no women in the jury panel because of a tradition in Federal Court that only men shall serve; also, because the facilities to care for women are lacking.

The jury will be locked up overnight during the trial.

The defendants were waiting to be called to trial when news of the guilty verdict against Dr. Joseph G. Steedle spread through the lobbies. This was somewhat of a shock.

On hand, too, were many of the 60 witnesses who will be called to the stand by the government in its efforts to reach the higher-ups of the Republican organization.

Standing guard over 10 ballot boxes were government attaches. These boxes will be offered as evidence that Coyne and his co-defendants on election night, November 8, 1932, sped from polling place to polling place urging members of election boards to alter and substitute ballots in favor of Republican candidates for federal offices.

The candidates were United State Senator James J. Davis and Congressman Michael J. Muldowney, both successful.

DEFENSE COUNSEL

Defense lawyers are almost as numerous as defendants. They are O. K. Eaton, for Senator Coyne; Charles J. Margiotti, Sebastian Pugliese; Edward G. Coll, Joseph Rossi, D. P. MacQuarrie, Mead J. Mulvihill, Max Spann, John Duggan, Jr., Warren Van Kirk.

The wards in which the government contends the dozen defendants did their "night riding" were the Second, Third, Fourth, Tenth and Fifteenth.

James P. Bailey's charges, made before Council a few days ago, were that the Mayor and his secretary, Theodore L. Moritz, had tried to persuade him to change his testimony to favor the Oakland Senator. Bailey said that because he refused he was fired as a city assessor. A federal grand jury investigation of the Bailey charges is expected.

Steedle Verdict Offers Puzzle For Assembly

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, May 24.—The conviction of Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, Allegheny County representative, would probably prevent him from sitting at any special session called this year but does not automatically remove him from office, in the opinion of legislative officials here today.

Steedle was found guilty of election fraud this morning by a jury in Federal Court at Pittsburgh.

There was no precedent of such a case in Pennsylvania history and authorities here believed that if the Legislature was convened this year the House would be required to take action to decide whether he should retain his seat.

It was pointed out, too, that if he appealed the verdict and then did not attend any special session that might be called, the Assembly might ignore the case just as the Senate did with Senator John J. McClure. After his conviction on a liquor conspiracy charge, McClure did not take his seat and no action was taken by the Senate.

Political circles here believed strong pressure would be brought to induce Steedle to resign as a candidate for re-election upless his conviction is reversed. He won the renomination at last week's primary. It was said here, however, that such action by the Republican party would be a matter for the Allegheny County Committee and not the state committee.

Officials at the State Elections Bureau said Steedle's name could not be stricken from the fall election ballot because of the verdict, but Pennsylvania's Constitution prevents a person convicted of a crime from taking a seat in the Legislature.

STEEDLE GUILTY IN VOTE FRAUD

the McKees Rocks district and a leader in the lower house of the General Assembly for many years.

NEW TRIALS SOUGHT

Defense counsel at once notified the court they would file motions for new trials in behalf of the five convicted men. They have four days in which to do so.

The jury had retired at 3:45 p. m. yesterday and reached a verdict at 9:30 p. m.

This morning at the opening of court the 12 men filed into the courtroom jammed with spectators and defendants in the Coyne trial, soon to begin.

Foreman Hiram Hetherington, of 1106 Jancey street, handed a sealed envelope to Miss Amelia Volbrecht, deputy clerk of Federal Court, who in turn gave it to Judge Schoonmaker.

The court, after glancing at the verdict, returned it to Miss Volbreacht, who read it aloud.

Government Witness Accused of Perjury

Earla Hess, 18, of Washington, a government witness in the trial of Joseph and Mary Romeo, of Langeloth, before Federal Judge Nelson McVicar on a white slave charge, was arrested for alleged perjury when court adjourned late yesterday. In default of $2,500 bond she was committed to jail pending a hearing before the United States commissioner.

New Switchboard For South Park

Up to now there's been one telephone line in South Park, with 17 parties on it and things were swell—except when someone wanted to call someone else. But the County Commissioners have changed things. They approved yesterday a switchboard system with 25 telephones with all the calls wanted and needed in the park for one year, at a cost of $197 a month.

Summer's Coming, So Here's Story About Parks

CRESSON, Pa., May 24.—(AP.)—George Parks has his parking problems.

He parked in a narrow parking space last night, but two other parkers, attempting to pull away about the same time, sideswiped Parks' parked car, causing considerable damage.

Said Park:

"I won't park there any more."

When the thermometer soars

Come to McCanns for summer foods. Lagging appetites perk up at the sight of spring lamb and spring chickens on beds of parsley in refrigerated cases. Fruits and melons promise cool refreshment. The vegetables fairly shout "I'm fresh" with their crisp, dewy appearance. You're cheating yourself if you do not shop at McCanns in the summertime.

SPRING LAMB

We know of no other meat that's quite so appetizing in warm weather as lamb . . . especially spring lamb . . . tender, juicy and mildly flavored. We have the lamb and the trimmings. It's up to you.

G. O. P. OFFERS OLIVE BRANCH TO PINCHOT

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—(AP.)—The Republican State Committee is to meet in Philadelphia June 9.

Its chairman, Gen. Edward Martin, issued the call after a conference yesterday with William S. Vare, Philadelphia leader, and announced that he would "urge" Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who vainly sought the party's Senatorial nomination, and all other primary candidates to attend.

This was interpreted as a harmony move in answer to rumors that Pinchot might run in the general election as an independent against Senator David A. Reed and the Democratic nominee, Joseph F. Guffey.

As for the possibility of his own re-election as state chairman, Martin would say nothing. He predicted the re-election of all other officers of the state committee.

Answering a suggestion which resulted from the designation of June 9, four days after the national committee meets in Chicago, Martin said:

"You can say for me that I will not be national chairman."

The national committee is to elect a successor to Everett Sanders and it has been suggested that Martin would be left free to become national chairman or remain state chairman under the arrangements for the meetings.

Martin stated that the Pennsylvania delegation to the Chicago meeting has not decided whom it will support.

WHITE PLAGUE GAIN SHOWN

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—(AP.)—Dr. Theodore F. Appel, state secretary of health, says the physical wellbeing of the individual is the "responsibility of the state and the medical profession," but state intervention should be limited.

He told the Pennsylvania Public Health Association last night that the commonwealth should act only "in a co-operative sense" to obtain adequate medical care for the indigent and to suppress quacks.

Dr. J. Bruce McCreary, deputy secretary of the state department of health, described the increase of tuberculosis cases among rural children as alarming and attributed it to malnutrition. He urged education of the public in the best ways to prepare nourishing food with the least expense.

The association concludes its two-day convention today.

3, Clipped by Bullet

MRS. JOHN TAGGERT COMFORTING HER SON RICHARD, 3

Master Richard, 314 Natchez street, with the bullet burn he received instead of a probable fatal wound—and all because George "Buddy" Hilson, 5-year-old pal, took his policeman-father's pistol outside to show to the fellers. George cried, said he was awful sorry he took the gun outside. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

SLEUTH'S CHILD SHOOTS CHUM

Three-year-old Richard Taggert, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Taggert, of 314 Natchez street, was suffering from a bullet burn on his left leg today.

Yesterday, George climbed a chair and found his father's revolver on a high shelf in his home, 112 Kearsage street, Mt. Washington. Proudly, he showed the gun to his pals at the corner. Somehow, George says, his finger caught on the trigger.

His father is Patrolman John Hilson.

Others to file included the boy candidate, James J. Kavanaugh, university student, who ran for the legislature. He previously had been a candidate for Mayor, but wasn't old enough and withdrew from the ballot. He listed his expenditures at $143 and his contribution one 50-cent piece from Allen D. Kerr, of 5213 Penn avenue, said to be a fellow student.

James Wettach, former legislator from the North Side, who was defeated last year and failed to be nominated this year, spent $303.50, his return stated, while Walter Lincoln Bouve, one of the candidates against Congressman Henry Ellenbogen, who won two party nominations, set his expenses as $116.

Shannon Loses Election Pipe To Schnader

HARRISBURG, May 24.—(INS.)—Attorney General William A. Schnader, whose collection of pipes is one of his proudest possessions, today added a long-stemmed brier to his pipe rack. It was given him by Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon to pay off an election bet.

More than a month ago after Schnader and Shannon had announced their respective candidacies for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, they met in the Capitol cafeteria. After an exchange of felicitations, Shannon said:

"I'll bet you a good pipe I win."

Schnader won at the May 15 primary.

JOB INSURANCE BILL OPPOSED

HARRISBURG, May 24.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, renewing its opposition to the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill now before Congress, says the measure would add $100,000,000 to the tax bill of Pennsylvania employers.

A bulletin issued by the Chamber contends the bill aims "to impose a tax on payrolls . . . for the sole purpose of raising revenue presumably for unemployment relief," but is "silent as to what the money will be used for."

WOMEN'S CLUBS ACTIVE OVER RUSHMORE

Membe' 'p of 114 women's clubs in Allegheny County hold prominent leadership with organizations throughout the country in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition through active co-operation with the Pittsburgh regional committee.

This support in the historical endeavor which is part of the tremendous project of creating the world's greatest national monument in the Black Hills of South Dakota means that every participating member will submit her text through the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs. The president, Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane, lauded the nationwide competition upon its inauguration and immediately named a special chairman for the Rusnmore cooperating committee.

Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger is the chairman and committee members to judge the membership's texts will be named at the close of the competition at midnight, May 30. Members of the 114 clubs affiliated with the federation are submitting their entries direct to Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger, chairman, 239 Gladstone road, Squirrel Hill, Pittsburgh.

The chairman reported many inquiries from members as to rules and technical questions. With seven days still remaining to submit their entries, many participants are holding their texts for further study and hevision before being satisfied that their version of America's epic tells the story of the nation's progress with expression that exemplyfies pride in the country's history.

ENTHUSIASM HIGH

Enthusiasm is the keynote of the daily increasing piles of mail carrying texts to the Pittsburgh Rushmore Committee from throughout Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and Northern West Virginia. The leters accompanying many of the 600-word texts express the enjoyment men, women and youth have gained through participation.

Yet disappointment awaits many of the texts which show careful study and sincere effort. The entrants' failure to read the rules and follow the daily hints offered in the Sun-Telegraph will cost them the opportunity to win the cash or scholarship awards and distinction of being winners.

Repeated warnings have been issued that no text can exceed 600 words; that every word written on the entry, other than the participant's name and address, counts in the text. It means that every date, subtitle or figure between episodes is counted. Some texts only exceed the 600 count by eight or 10 words, but the entry must be eliminated under the rules stipulated by the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission. Those who made this mistake are urged to rewrite their text and submit a second copy which conforms with the rules.

Every participant is warned that an entry received with a postmark later than midnight, May 30, will not be considered.

HEARST LAUDED FOR AID TO FAIR

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
Universal Service.

CHICAGO, May 24.—William Randolph Hearst, accompanied by his son, George Hearst, Arthur Brisbane, the internationally famous "Today" commentator, and a party of Hearst executives and friends had a preview of A Century of Progress yesterday.

An official luncheon was tendered the party later by fair officials in the administration building at which President Rufus C. Dawes and Gen. Charles Gates Dawes told how last year's fair was made possible "by the co-operation of Mr. Hearst."

MADE FAIR POSSIBLE

Gen. Dawes said:

"I am not saying this because you are here, but I want to say that if it hadn't been for your co-operation at the darkest hour, last year's exposition would not have been held.

"We had to have a $10,000,000 guarantee in the face of the depression. We raked and scraped and finally got up to $8,000,000. There we were stopped. I went to many and pleaded and begged, but could not get any further. It looked as if we would have to lie down and quit, call the whole thing off.

"It was then that Mr. Hearst took a chance. He was one of four men who pledged the balance. Mr. Hearst signed for $500,000."

The others, Gen. Dawes said, were the Rosenwald estate, Samuel Insull and the Dawes family.

ASSURED SUCCESS

President Rufus Dawes also expressed the gratitude of the fair officials and the city of Chicago for the aid extended by Mr. Hearst when things looked dark and foreboding. He said:

"It is a great pleasure and an honor for the officials of the exposition to entertain today one who contributed so much to A Century of Progress Exposition. The support of Mr. Hearst at a critical time laid the foundation of our success."

Mr. Dawes recounted the co-operation of not only Mr. Hearst but many of Mr. Hearst's executives in bringing the 1933 exposition into reality.

CITES ENCOURAGEMENT

The executive added:

"The encouragement you gave us personally, Mr. Hearst, aside from your great newspapers, and the encouragement we received from your associates and fine writers made this year's fair possible, as well as last year's. If it had not been for your suggestions and great influence we could not have repeated the exposition this year.

"Because of what you and your fine organization have done, we are justified in predicting that in all essential features the 1934 exposition will greatly surpass 1933."

Responding to Mr. Dawes' request, Mr. Hearst spoke briefly of the great fair and the "small" efforts put forth by the Hearst organization in support of it.

PRAISES LEADERS

He said that its greatest value was educational, and added:

"It is very kind and pleasing to have our small efforts commended as highly as Mr. Dawes has commended them.

"I don't think we supplied much of anything except confidence. We knew the fair was going to be a reality and a success when we knew what the management was going to be.

"I am glad the fair is going to be repeated. The fair of last year was the record of a Century of Progress. The fair of this year is a promise of a century of greater progress.

FAIR INSPIRATION

"The fair is an education and an inspiration. But the only way you can get an adequate idea of it an' absorb this inspiration is to see it.

"Institutions of education have been closed to many of our people during the years of depression. Now these people can come, hear and get a great part of this education they have missed.

"Mr. Brisbane writes what everybody reads.

"We have some papers scattered over the country. We are going to interest the people in the fair this year more than they were in the fair last year.

"That is all I can do to return thanks for the kind words you have just spoken."

DOLLARS GO FAR AT FAIR

By INEZ BROCKWAY
International News Service.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Dollars are deserting the NRA!

To compete with low prices and free entertainment at the 1934 World's Fair, dollars have agreed to work overtime without extra charge, according to Two-Bits, pretty secretary of the decimal industry. He exclaimed:

"It's a conspiracy. Railroads, hotels, tourist camps, lodging houses, restaurants and A Century of Progress management have made prices so low that dollars and us parts-thereof will have to work twice as hard to get spent."

And is he right!

Railroads over the country have set rates to Chicago so low that the rails are groaning. Tourist camps for the auto caravaners are ready with lodgings as low as 75 cents.

Chicago hotel accommodations can be had from $1 up, and private homes will be offering first-class rooms as low as 75 cents.

Meals at the fair run down to 15 cents; lagoon boats have cut the price of sightseeing tours in half and maintain a dock to dock taxi service for 10 cents. Fair buses take children for half price—5 cents.

Listen Mother
LET'S TELL 'EM HOW WE KNOW PALMOLIVE'S SUCH A GENTLE SOAP!

"I'm really worried 'bout those other babies who don't get Palmolive for their baths! 'Cause I'm sure their little skins are just as tender as my own . . . And don't you remember what a time we had till our doctor said to use Palmolive!"

If he could talk, we're pretty sure that's about what he'd say! There couldn't be a kinder, gentler soap for a baby's skin . . . or for yours, either! Palmolive is gentlest because it's made from a scientific blend of olive and palm oils.

3

And do you know that 20,000 beauty experts, the world over, say Palmolive is best for daily complexion care? Why don't you try the two-minute Palmolive treatment night and morning? See how lovely it will make your skin!

TODAY

tors crouching and shivering at the lightning's flash, if someone had told them "some day your descendants will use that power to milk the descendants of your wife's tame female buffalo." Be sure to see those cows at the Chicago exposition of progress. They like being milked by "disinfected electric rubber fingers."

MR. RUFUS DAWES and his brother, General Dawes, gave a pre-opening luncheon yesterday in honor of William Randolph Hearst, who came from California. Rufus Dawes told of the service rendered to Chicago and the Century of Progress Exposition by Hearst newspapers published all over the United States.

His brother, General Dawes, mentioned the fact hitherto unknown to this writer and others, that in addition to valuable publicity and at a time, deep in the depression, when the exposition's financial prospects and the prospects of putting it through were most discouraging, contributions being few and inadequate, Mr. Hearst stepped into the breach to the extent of five hundred thousand dollars, twice as much, General Dawes said, as any other individual had risked of his own money.

MR. HEARST, promising full support for this 1934 edition of the exposition, observed that last year's exposition was held to celebrate one hundred years of PAST progress. This year's exposition will be welcomed as the promise of another century of progress and of prosperity greater than America has ever known.

He suggested that it is the duty of parents to take the children as they come from schools and colleges to see the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition this summer and enable them to see made real that which they have been studying in theory, the actual demonstration of America's inexhaustible resources in industrial and engineering science. Take your boys and girls to the Chicago exposition and double the value of their school teaching.

General Dawes had said:

"Mr. Hearst took a long chance when he backed this exposition to an extent of five hundred thousand dollars when its success was so doubtful."

Mr. Hearst remarked aside, to Mr. Paul Block, well known newspaper owner:

"You never take a big risk when you interest yourself in a well planned undert king that has the backing of such a city as Chicago, or any other sound American enterprise."

This Century of Progress Exposition, which you must see, will prove to you that human progress as a whole, and American progress and prosperity especially, have only just begun. Go to Chicago.

LACK OF SPACE makes it impossible to describe adequately even one of the exhibits, to say nothing of six miles of exhibits.

Everything about health, all the latest information, you will find in the Hall of Science medical group.

You will be surprised to see what you looked like before you were born.

It would have surprised William Jennings Bryan even more for he had a tiny vestigial tail which finally dwindled down to the os cocyx and also a thin coating of hair all over.

If you are working at the age-old problem of "perpetual motion," stop, for you will find that it can't be done, except by Divine power. Newton said he could not explain the motion of the earth except on the assumption that it had been started in its course around the sun, "thrown by the hand of God." Modern science explains it otherwise.

You will learn all the mysterious rays known to man including the latest "cosmic ray." It takes six inches of solid lead to stop the X-ray. The cosmic ray goes through eleven feet, one hundred and twenty one inches of solid lead. These cosmic rays, in their mysterious journey, are passing, as you read this, through every one of the thousands of millions of separate cells that make up YOUR BODY.

You don't feel it because, compared with those rays, the atoms of which you are composed with their protons and electrons, in proportion to their size as far apart as sun and earth, "make up the human body" through which these rays and the "imponderable" ether itself pass as readily as flowing water through a coarse fish net.

Is not that interesting?

Then don't miss the "Century of Progress Exposition which opens in Chicago on Saturday.

YOU WILL read more and more about it in this column; about the "black forest" village, where the extraordinary skill of landscape artists make mountains, castles, houses seem lifesize, although they are painted on a fence only twenty-five feet high. When a bluebird sits on top of that fence suddenly, comparing its size to the skillfully painted scenery, the bird looks bigger than a dinosaur.

You will spend interesting hours in the Italian village, where Mussolini shows modern and ancient Italy, the stone work of the primitive Etruscans, the magnificent columns of Rome's imperial days and the rejuvenated "Mussolini Italy" of 1934, with one of the beautiful Gimininani towers. And then there is the Midway; you know what that is, or you should know before the exposition closes, mermaids nearly real, two-headed babies, three-headed calves, ladies that dance strangely. And there is the village of tiny houses inhabited by midgets, queer condensed dwarfs from all over the world.

YOU WILL not fail to see the magnificent collection of paintings, ancient and modern, the most beautiful from all over the world, gathered by a patriotic discriminating body of citizens in Chicago's fine public art gallery. It is a new collection this year.

And while you are there, don't fail to see the full-size reproduction of the Colleioni equestrian statue. Never was so magnificent a horse seen on earth nor another such powerful rider.

Don't fail to visit the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago this summer and stay as long as you can. Your mind will grow in power, your brain convolutions will become deeper. Thinking power depends on the depth of those convolutions, just as soil fertility depends on the depth of the plowshare where the soil is really good.

YOU MAY ASK:

"Why so much repetition? Why do you say so often, 'Don't fail to see the Century of Progress Exposition?'"

Because REPETITION IS REPUTATION. You learn that from Cato, who did not like Carthage, from the religious service which repeats so often, "We beseech thee to help us, oh Lord," and from any advertising man who knows his business.

Whatever else you miss, whatever else you see, wherever else you go, be sure to go to Chicago to see the Century of Progress Exposition. Be sure NOT to miss the extraordinary accumulation of knowledge, beauty and amusement that Chicago genius and enterprise offers to you.

P. S.—See the Chicago exposition this summer without fail.

ASHE CUTS LIFE OF DOOMED MEN

HARRISBURG, May 24.—(AP.)—Stanley P. Ashe, warden of Western Penitentiary, has decided to conduct executions at Rockview prison at 12:30 a. m., Mondays instead of 7 a. m., as heretofore to lessen the hours of strain for condemned.

The first to die at the earlier hour will be Charles Walker, Philadelphia Negro, whose application for commutation of sentence was refused yesterday by the State Pardon Board.

The prison officials say they feel the 12:30 a. m. hour also will be more convenient for the official witnesses.

TURNER TO FLY PITTSBURGH'S GREETINGS

As a compliment to Pittsburgh's interest in A Century of Progress, a squadron of Illinois National Guard planes will meet Col. Roscoe Turner and escort him to the Chicago Airport on Saturday when he flies to the opening of the World's Fair with greetings from the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

Col. Turner, one of the nation's foremost speed pilots and holder of both transcontinental air records, will attempt to set a new mark on his flight from Pittsburgh to Chicago.

After he lands at the airport he will be escorted to the administration building of the World's Fair. There he will deliver his greetings to Rufus C. Dawes, president, from former Gov. John S. Fisher, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and the Pittsburgh firms which are participating in the fair.

At noon tomorrow, Col. Turner will address the luncheon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in its auditorium.

Swimming School Picks Pittsburgher

Nathan H. Kaufman, swimming director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, has been appointed a member of the faculty of the American Red Cross Chautauqua National Aquatic School, which will open at Chautauqua, N. Y., on June 20. Mr. Kaufman took highest scholastic honors at the school last year.

NEW WAYS OF SOLVING THAT OLD COOKING PROBLEM

Here's How to Get Around Chronic Family Kicker

What will you have for dinner tonight . . . a set Thursday menu or one with a few new touches to it? Warm weather makes cooking a real problem, for no matter what you have some one is sure to protest, "Don't want any; not hungry."

One way of getting around the chronic family kicker is to have him—or very likely her—prepare an occasional menu. Hand the not-hungry disturber your file of Prudence Penny prize recipes and order:

"Go ahead, pick out your own meal. You'll find all the ideas you want in the file."

Then with a wealth of tempting dishes at hand, a few minutes thumbing through the recipes is sure to produce enough appealing foods for even the most particular of appetites.

Keep adding to the pile of available recipes by sending in your best to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph. If used in the prize column, they will be awarded a $5 or a $1 prize. No recipes are returned.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

DUKE OF ORANGE PIE
Orange Custard

One-half cup cake flour.
One cup sugar.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two eggs.
Two cups milk.
One-third cup orange juice.
Grated rind of one orange.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One cup heavy cream.

Sift flour and measure, mix with sugar and salt, add slightly beaten eggs. Scald milk, and add slowly to first mixture, return to double boiler and cook 20 minutes. Remove from heat, add vanilla, orange juice and rind. When cold fold in one-quarter of cream whipped until stiff, and sweetened with two tablespoons sugar. Pour half of custard into baked pie shell. Place circle of pastry (baked in bottom of cake pan) on top of custard and cover with remaining custard. Spread rest of whipped cream over top, and sprinkle with chopped nuts, and decorate with cherries. Makes one eight-inch pie.

Pastry

One and one-half cups cake flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-half cup shortening.
Five or six tablespoons ice water.

Sift flour, measure. Sift again with salt. Cut in shortening coarsely. Add enough ice water to barely hold together. Turn out on slightly floured board, and roll out two-thirds of dough and fit over back of eight-inch pie tin. Prick liberally with a fork. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Cool before filling. Roll out remaining dough to form a circle large enough to fit the bottom of a nine-inch cake pan. Prick liberally with fork and bake in same manner as the pie shell.

WAFFLE GINGERBREAD

One-quarter cup butter.
One cup thick molasses.
One and one-half teaspoon soda.
One-half cup sour milk and sour cream mixed.
One egg.
Three cups flour.
One teaspoon ginger.
One-half teaspoon each cinnamon and allspice.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.
Marshmallow filling.

Put the butter and molasses into top of the double boiler and heat thoroughly, but do not boil. Beat the soda into the milk and add the egg, beating well. Sift all the dry ingredients together and return to sifter. Remove the molasses mixture from the fire and add the sour cream mixture to it, beating well. Sift the dry ingredients slowly into this, continuing to beat. Bake rather thin on well greased waffle iron (or on ungreased electric iron) moderately hot. When done, break carefully into four parts. Spread marshmallow filling on two parts and cover each with another part.

Marshmallow Filling

One-half pound marshmallows.
One cup sugar.
One-quarter cup water.
One egg white, beaten stiff.

Add the melted marshmallows, beating until stiff enough to spread. Add the flavoring and salt. Other filling may be substituted for the marshmallow, or the waffle breads may be served with whipped cream, slightly sweetened.

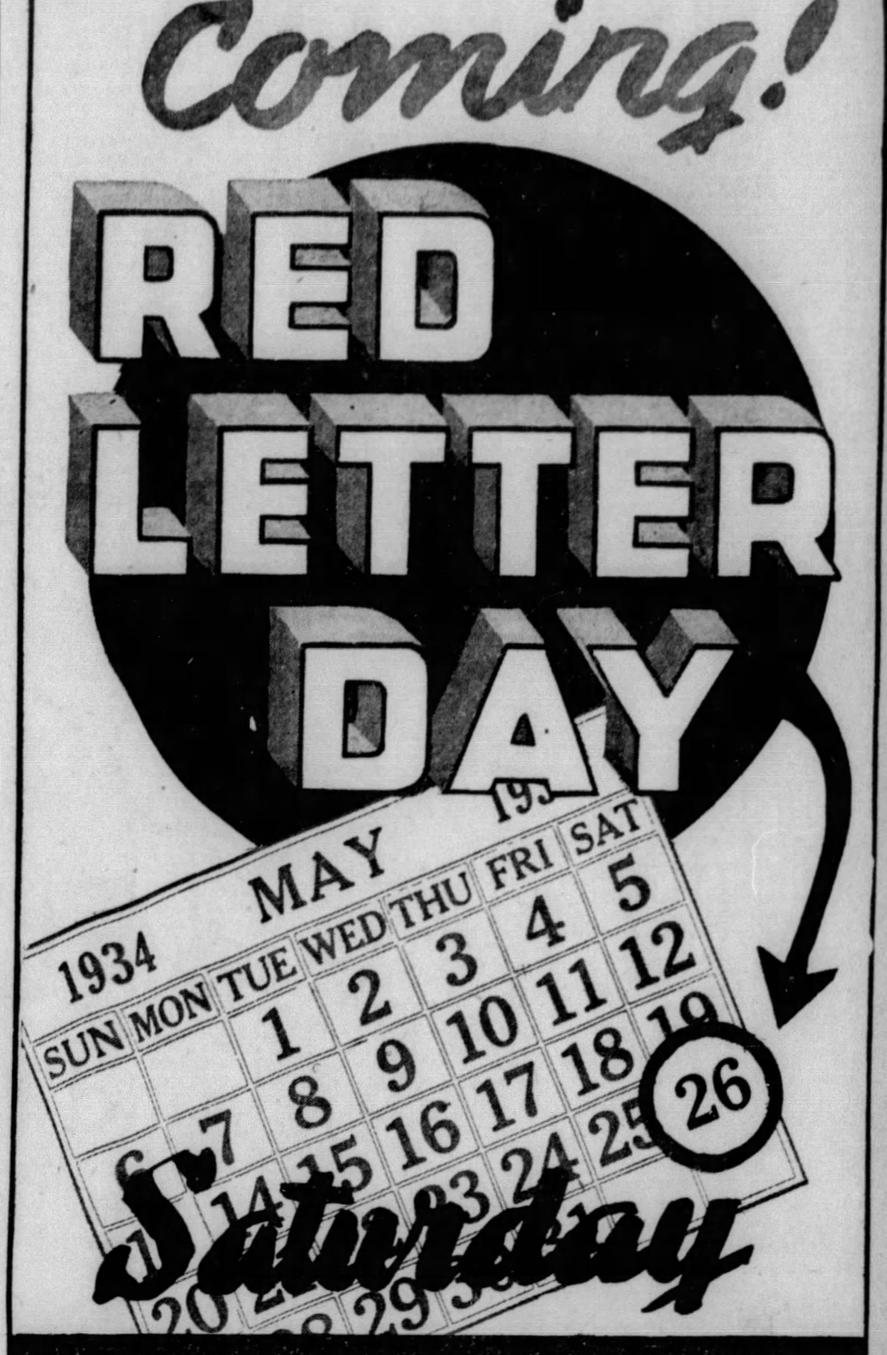
RED LETTER DAY



FRANK & SEDER

Enjoy your MEMORIAL DAY TRIP on this GREAT TIRE!

You get the slow, even wear of closer-nested non-skid blocks and ribs.

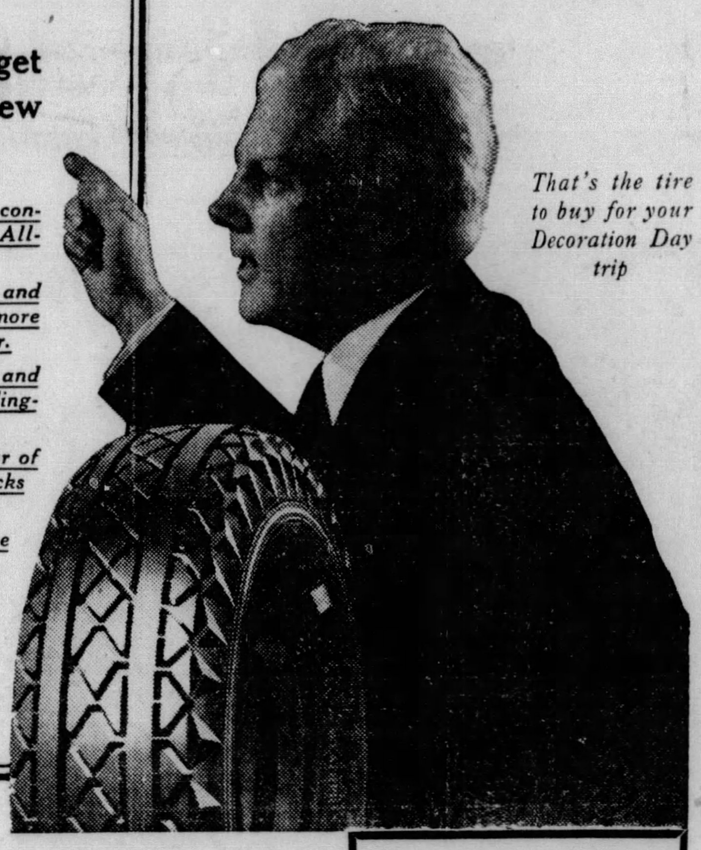
—all of which adds up to 43% MORE NON-SKID MILEAGE at no extra cost to you!



That's the tire to buy for your Decoration Day trip

Goodyear has licked problem that baffled the tire industry—with the new "G-3". See it here!

IT TAKES a better tread to keep its grip on modern high-speed highways—with faster cars, quicker get-aways—more powerful brakes. All these strains grind away ordinary treads too fast.

But now we've got the answer! A tread that keeps its grip 43% longer—gives 43% more non-skid mileage. Grueling, grinding road tests show that it keeps its grip twice as long as competitive tires!

Read that list of extras in this new "G-3" All-Weather tire—and remember, you have to have "NON-SKID" before you can have "NON-SKID MILEAGE"—you have to have GRIP where you see it on this tire—in the center of the tread—if you want the extra miles of safety which you get in the "G-3". It costs no more!

It costs more to build—but YOU PAY NO MORE when you buy the new "G-3" ALL-WEATHER

PINK UNDIE GIRL PUNCHED BY ANGRY WIFE

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—(AP.)—A 20-year-old girl, whose appearance in pink underwear on a busy street led to her arrest and that of a policeman on charges of attempted holdup, was punched in the face by the officer's wife at a hearing before a magistrate.

The girl, Frances Walters, and Robert C. Wisterhood, 31, the policeman, were held without bail for the grand jury, accused of trying to hold up the millinery shop of Mrs. Ruth Liebowitz. In making her getaway from the store, the girl's dress was torn off.

As the two prisoners were held yesterday, the wife walked forward in the courtroom and swung her left fist to Miss Walter's jaw. The girl turned toward her assailant just in time to receive another cack on her chin. Mrs. Wisterwood shouted:

"You horrible woman. That will teach you a lesson."

Miss Walters and the policeman were arrested in the girl's room yesterday a short time after the attempted holdup.

The robbery attempt was foiled by the shopkeeper, who defied the man with a pistol and tore the dress from his girl companion.

Parted Years Ago, Aged Couple Re-Marries

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—(AP.)—Divorced 36 years ago, Samuel R. Breedlove, 74, and Emma Shanks, 71, were remarried today. Breedlove said:

"I'm marrying that old sweetheart of mine."

Mrs. Shanks has been living in Chicago, Breedlove at Monrovia, Cal.

Woman Hit by Auto In Bellevue Street

Mrs. N. W. French, 65, of 1 Norbert street, Ross Township, was injured last night when struck by an automobile at Balph and Orchard avenues, Bellevue. The alleged driver of the car, R. F. Blair, of 221 Perrysville avenue, West View, was held under $1,000 bail, according to police.

YOUNG ARTIST EXHIBITS WORKS

By PENELOPE REDD

The Gulf Gallery is showing an exhibition of study pieces by George Bellon. Although 24 years of age, he has matured slowly because of his disability, due to infantile paralysis and a childhood spent conquering the attendant physical difficulties. As a student at the Industrial Home for Crippled Children, he showed his desire to draw and was encouraged by Miss Shirley who secured a scholarship for him at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh.

Miss Redd

His mats attest his profound respect for the Italian masters of the Renaissance, particularly Michelangelo. As did the men of that golden era, young Bellon chooses the human body as the most expressive vehicle for the emotions.

He has promising studies in one of an old man and another of a youth with a tennis raquet. From such studies it is difficult to fortell how far even an apparently talented student may go in the matter of free invention in later life. George Bellon has the resoluteness that is as necessary to an artist as an anchor is to a sailor.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Mrs. Mae Nugent, Point View street, a new subscriber and from now on a Globe Trotter, First Class, made an amazing discovery that might prove invaluable to the state liquor stores. The Liquor Control Board members may use her letter as a testimonial for their products if they so desire. The following is quoted:

"I had been painting about the house this past week and when I was through placed a bottle of turpentine on the bottom shelf of the cupboard intending to put it away later. In the meantime my son-in-law arrived home for the week-end and brought with him a bottle of gin. He put it on the shelf beside the bottle of turpentine. Both bottles were alike.

"Today I mixed some more paint. Instead of adding turpentine I added gin. The paint is fine, no harm done. So you can see gin serves more than one purpose."

There can be no doubt that Mrs. Johnston, 2718 Leland avenue, is one of the sweeter Globe Trotters. You can't fool the bees and they have chosen her home about which to swarm.

It is the first swarm reported this season.

Mrs. Smith, of the North Side, wants to know what to do to keep her canary bird from moulting.

Globe Crotter note: Please send to me what information you have which tends to prove or disprove that Henry Ford bought the birthplace of Stephen Foster.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Old and new favorites are listed for performance by the Allegheny Four during the 6:15 to 6:30 program.

Mate Chained Her, Wife Asks Divorce

Wheeler and Woolsey Not on Speaking Terms; Lose Radio Job

By AIRCASTER

Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, screen comics, were booked several weeks ago to perform on the Hall of Fame event on WCAE next Sunday night, but they wont.

"It's because of that old trouble, squabbling has stymied them again. They are notorious in the show world for their spats and long spells wherein they do not speak to each other.

The quarrel was renewed a few days ago and the sponsor heard of it. The boys quit speaking to each other and the sponsor wanted to know how in the world they could prepare material without discussing it.

That puzzled the two comics also, and the upshot of it all is that their booking has been cancelled and Groucho and Chico Marx have been substituted.

Radio, with the co-operation of the city of Chicago, is to introduce the country to the second edition of the World's Fair on Friday night with a special opening-eve broadcast to originate in four places.

The program, to be handled by WJAS-CBS for an hour at 9:30, will come from Chicago, New York, Detroit and Hollywood and include Waring's Pennsylvanians, Jan Garber's and Ted Weems' orchestras, the Detroit Symphony and the Chrysler Male Chorus in addition to a group of screen artists from Hollywood.

It would be well worth Max Baer's time financially if the California challenger stops Primo Carnera, June 14.

If the challenger kayoes the huge Italian his present radio contract will be renewed for 13 weeks at "close to $10,000 a week."

* * *

Upon Capt. S. C. Hooper, U. S. N., the Institute of Radio Engineers of America has bestowed its highest honor—a gold medal for outstanding contributions to the art of radio communications.

When radio came into existence, England endeavored to monopolize it, as she had monopolized the cables.

Woman's Ambition to Be Somebody Brings Woe

This is the life of Lily Pons, the slim and romantic French singer who enthralls us over the radio and in opera.

Little do we think when we are listening in on a beautiful voice, the emotional misery that may lie hidden behind the exquisite tones. The long hours of the singer's life that must be given over to the cultivation of her genius. The things she must sacrifice to create this entertainment for us. The thousand and one good times you and I perhaps enjoy that she must eschew . . . and all that she may arrive at the perfection of her art.

Miss Brunot

Of course, sisters, we pay our real money to hear her. We sit in comfortable oblivion, with the stub-end of our ticket somewhere about us . . . and drink in the restfulness and the beauty of our pleasure . . . The actress we know is there . . . we are listening to her. Maybe we are feasting our eyes upon her . . . And so we crowd out of the audience . . . we ride home by car or go by foot . . . and think no more about it.

ALWAYS HOPEFUL

Oh, yes, . . . We know who she is . . . we chat about her in a light, sentimental way, and even envy her . . . Why, we could be great, too. There is that singing voice of ours, or those dancing feet we possess, or that genius we have for putting the written word together . . . and someday, we, too, will have the whole world gaping.

But most of us go on in the path of least resistance. We like our good times . . . By and by, love comes knocking, and we accept it. We have a home of our own, children, a husband . . . friends galore. And are happy in our way. Yet the hunger is there within us in our lonely hours, and for the glamor of the outside world which we have missed.

THRILLED BY GENIUS

I can still feel the excitement of the going home after having heard and seen Bernhardt . . . I shall never forget the thrill of seeing the great Paderewski and watching his fingers meticulously pound forth the marvelous trills and runs which his masterful technique produced for me . . . There was Otis Skinner in "Kismet," Maude Adams in "Peter Pan" . . . Eva Legallienne . . . Jane Cowl . . . and many others . . .

Each sent me back to my everyday life, the glamor and the loveliness of their individual triumphs aching in the heart of me.

And yet the home-making hearts have their compensations. . . . The girl who STAYS PUT and awaits her man . . . perhaps her example is the likeliest for most of us . . . There can only be a few at the top . . . and could you, Dancer, ever get there, no matter how fast your feet fly to music or how perfectly you manipulate the intricate step?

WANTS TO BE DANCER

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl of 22 and am working in a downtown office. But I don't feel I have found my place. There is always the urge in me to step out and do something big. No matter where I am, a theater, listening in over the radio, at opera, I always go home with the drab heart, wishing and wishing.

I can dance. I love it. Everywhere I go, the boys seek me for a partner. Not because I am beautiful or entertaining, but because my toes jump so easily to the music. I can just do any step, and without any effort. Do you think I could become a great classic dancer, like Ruth St. Denis?

The thing is, there is a young fellow who wants me to marry him. He is very ambitious and works hard, and already is getting on in his business. But he could never leave Pittsburgh.

I would always be here, right in this city, and that irks me. For I want to be on the go. I would love to go and live in New York. And when I read of places like Paris, I am unhappy for a week.

IN LOVE WITH HIM

The fellow says if I become his wife, I'll have to settle down and make a home for him. He even talks as if he wants about a dozen children and he thinks I should know how to cook, and so on. Why he chooses me, I don't know, and yet when I am with him, I want to please him, and even am in love with him.

What shall I do? My people are crazy over him, and consider me as good as engaged. All our friends expect the match.

A Ruth St. Denis.

Well, Ruth, I scarcely know. And yet this fellow is too good to pass up. He has the makings of an excellent husband, and you are in love with him. Would you like some other girl to carry him off? That is what will happen if you go to New York, or Paris.

I can see plainly how you might not like your downtown job. You may not be fitted for it. Yet I can't see quite so clearly why you may not be fitted to STAY PUT and be a WIFE. A man to be successful cannot be a wanderer. A rolling stone gathers no moss . . . that is an old and truthful saying.

You aren't sure, anyway, that what may be good amateur dancing, would be genius. You may be only thinking of the glamor of public appearance. And not of the lonely drive toward it. Better wait awhile, and keep on with the boy friend.

WISTFUL GIRL QUICKLY CAPTURES MEN'S HEARTS, SAYS FAY KING

By FAY KING

Although smiles and laughter are attractive, too, especially if a girl has pretty teeth, still it seems the wistful expression is the winning one after all.

Throughout the years great painters have preferred to immortalize the mysterious, sad type of beauty, and in our own modern movies the Mona Lisa ladies certainly have a far greater following than any of the laughing, gay ones.

Surely all the poets and painters and movie directors, not to mention the dear public, can't be wrong.

So do not worry if you lack a sense of humor, and are more inclined to be serious.

Better to be quick to tears than to laughter, for nothing can be more fatal to romance or success than laughing—at the wrong time!

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Hugh Certain Lee Chow Not Shamming

I do not often lose every bit of poise and courage I possess, but when Hugh Grantland's knock sounded upon the nursery door, and Lillian asked if she or I should go to the door, I was panic stricken.

"Oh, you do!" I whispered, starting toward the door of the room in which my baby daughter was sleeping. "And let me out of here, please! I can't see him."

She made a quick flanking movement and caught me by the shoulder.

"Don't you dare!" she said, giving me a sound little shake. "If you funk this, you'll never forgive yourself, nor yet me for permitting you to make an idiot of yourself. What do you imagine Hugh will think if you run away from him like this? He knows you're in here. You talked to him just before."

"I hadn't heard then what he told father," I said.

"And you want to make Hugh feel like a criminal because of that?" she retorted. "Come! This isn't like you, Madge, and I'm not going to let you get away with it. In 10 more seconds I'm going to open that door, clutching you by the collar if I must, or letting you stand up as a lady should. Take your choice. Neither 'and' nor 'but.'"

LILLIAN WINS

"You win," I whispered. "Open the door. I shan't run away."

"Good girl!" she murmured as she moved toward the door.

From the threshhold Hugh Grantland flashed an appealing look at me. Then he advanced into the room and stood before me apologetically, beseechingly, almost humbly.

"Your father said he had told you," he began uncertainly. "Can you ever forgive me for having brought anything so terrible upon you, even though unwittingly? You will believe, will you not, that I never dreamed Lee Chow had any of those crazed ideas in his head?"

My panic dropped from me as if it were a discarded garment. His need was far greater than mine. I had only the memory of danger to Dicky miraculously averted. He had the onus of responsibility for the crazed acts of his friend, and felt a burden of actual guilt, fantastic as the idea was.

DOESN'T BLAME HIM

I put out my hand to him with a spontaneous friendly gesture.

"Please don't say anthing like that," I pleaded. "How can you be blamed for anything Lee Chow has done?"

He clasped my hands convulsively—held them as if he never would let them go.

"I might have known what your divine charity would be," he said. "But I feel that I should have realized that this seizure was coming on. I knew that he was talking strangely, but—"

He had been looking into my face as he talked, and at something he saw there he stepped back a pace and dropped my hands.

"I have not believed it," I said quietly. "But I have been accustomed to rely upon your judgment in many things—vital things, such as life and death. If you, who know him better than anyone else in the world, believe Lee Chow to be insane, then I have no alternative but to share that belief."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Gentle breeding expresses itself in speech as well as manners and appearance. A gentle voice and perfect, clear enunciation are unmistakable evidences of mannerly training.

Shouters, shrill speakers, mumblers should reform. If they don't they'll be demoted from the charm-and-beauty ranks.

One reason why the cosmetic business flourishes is that the cash customers are wasteful of toiletries. There are ways of economizing.

Apply powder sparingly, instead of slapping it on and rubbing most of it off. The effect is better when it is used discreetly. So it is with lipstick. In the problem of make-up, addition is better than subtraction.

Apply perfume with an atomizer instead of tipping up the bottle. Use sachet powder in dresser drawers. Doesn't cost much and the scent lasts for many months.

How to Keep Well

'Gingivitis' A Common Disorder

Everyone is familiar with the common name of Vincent's Angina. It is known to the public as "trench mouth." Health journals, magazines and newspapers have stressed the dangers of this disease. On the other hand, too little attention has been given to a simple inflammation of the gums know as "gingivitis."

Dr. Copeland

Gingivitis is a rather common disorder. Usually, it can be traced to a failure to practice mouth hygiene. Continued neglect of gingivitis leads to serious infections and perhaps to chronic constitutional disorders.

The disease is accompanied by swollen and painful gums. At times, the pain may be so severe as to prevent needed sleep and rest. The gums are sensitive and bleed upon the slightest provocation. They bleed when the teeth are brushed.

"Halitosis," or bad breath, is indeed a disagreeable and repulsive condition. Those who suffer from it are anxious to get rid of the offensive breath, yet they often overlook gingivitis as the most probable cause. Bad breath, headache, digestive disturbances and various nervous symptoms can be traced to this unpleasant ailment.

Bear in mind that many germs are all the time found in the mouth and throat. Neglect of mouth hygiene leads to infection with these germs and absorption of poisonous substances. Permanent disabilities, such as neuritis, arthritis and neuralgia, are often traced to such infections of the mouth and throat.

Gingivitis is frequently seen in individuals who have poor health. It is commonly found in persons convalescing from serious disease. The lowered resistance prepares the way for the germs.

Daily care of the teeth and periodic visits to the dentist will help to insure strong and healthy gums. Regular brushing of the teeth and careful use of dental floss will remove food debris, prevent dental decay and inflammation of the gums. Many persons have sensitive gums and are extremely susceptible to tartar formation. They are likely to get gingivitis. These persons, I strongly recommend to make periodic visits to the dentist for special preventative treatment.

I cannot overstate the importance of a well balanced diet. This should contain an abundant supply of fresh fruits and vegetables, cereals, milk, butter, cream and eggs. These foods furnish the elements essential to strong teeth and healthy gums.

Bear in mind that besides a proper diet, an adequate supply of fresh air and sunshine will help prevent gingivitis. No person should ever become afflicted with this infection if he takes the proper precautions.

Correct Manners

Birthday and Graduation Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—What shall I give my girl friend for a birthday gift... other than jewelry?

2—What should I give her for graduation from school?

3—How many and what kind of orchids should I send her for an evening school reception to be held at a hotel?

CHARLES.

1—You musn't give her jewelry, unless you are engaged to her. For her birthday, send her a corsage or a box of flowers, a box of candy, one or two books, an accessory for her desk, a box of good-looking letter paper—something like this, which will register excellent taste on your part.

2—The same kind of gift is appropriate for her graduation present. Any of these gifts may be chosen with a great deal of taste and discrimination and style.

3—Orchids are apt to be too sophisticated to send to a young girl...a corsage of gardenias are vastly more appropriate. But if you especially wish to send her orchids, choose the light shades ...white ones are, of course, especially beautiful and more appropriate than the purple shades, and yellow ones too or the ones shaded with brown tones are lovely.

Arrival of Dale's Wife Halts Love Affair

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

Dale's face was white. It was utterly colorless except for the black, flaming, indignant eyes.

Pippin said nervously: "It's not a ghost?"

"Yes, it is. It's my wife."

He looked shaken and strange with the red gone from his lips.

He said vaguely: "It's three years—she won't stay long! Pippin, wait down there. Wait at your pier—say five o'clock. You will, please!"

Pippin walked home, her heart going rapid yet faint; a chill, bright tensity in all her thoughts.

Dale's wife returned. But why? She took deep breaths. They went through her with warm alarm.

All afternoon as she sat with her mother on the great, warm slabs of granite that edge the water, it kept darting into her mind like a quick, sharp needle: His wife—how odd!

She climbed the diving rock and let herself drop into the clear, deep silver of the lake. The icy splash of the water was good.

Then she saw Dale's boat. He was going over to the landing on the far side of the lake where the road ends. The dark, small woman was with him.

She didn't see him returning, but at 5 o'clock, Pippin went down to her boat.

The high, precipitous cliffs on either side of the long, narrow inlet shut her from view.

"She's gone, Pippin."

"I saw you in your boat."

"Well—I want to explain."

"But why, Dale? You don't have to explain to me."

He dropped her hand, but stood regarding her with dark, quiet, deeply-wounded eyes.

Plans Change

"Oh—just this—we parted three years ago, as I told you. I've not seen her since until today. She wrote me a letter which I have—said she was never coming back—life together was impossible and she was starting suit for divorce.

"That was fine with me. But I wasn't interested in any one else—never intended to remarry. So I let the whole thing slide—waiting for her to start it. She didn't.

"About seven months ago she started writing to me. I've done fairly well with my work. Though she has money of her own, she liked the idea that I was making a name—as she thought. She suggested a reconciliation. I never answered her letters. There were four of these. Just before I came up here, I filed suit charging desertion. She's been away, Two days ago, she returned to Los Angeles, where she lives. The notice was then given her. She found out where I was and came up here to protest."

"I'm sorry," Pippin said, not looking at him and feeling lost for the right words. She felt strangely cold and drained. "I hope she won't make you unhappy."

He gave her a sharp, tormented, questioning look. "It's not in her power to make me unhappy! She did all she could in that direction years ago. I'm not at all worried about her.

Wife Powerless

"I'm thinking of you. I'm sorry I wasn't more explicit in the beginning. But, of course, there was no occasion then to talk of my personal affairs.

"And I've considered myself free. I AM free. The legal technicality is external. It will be quickly settled. She is quite powerless to block it in view of proofs I have."

He said, bitterly: "I seem shabby to you. Can you think I would really trick you?"

She had never seen him unhappy or depressed. Now the black side-burns and the black hair emphasized the drawn pallor of his face.

"You haven't tricked me. In what way? I've not thought—"

"But I have! I've thought of you, Pippin. This morning I asked you to marry me a year from now!"

He looked directly into her eyes, his own smouldering. He said, with a sudden red tide sweeping his face: "I care for you, Pippin. I'll keep on caring. There's no choice."

He stood a moment hesitant, then walked over to his boat.

"Good-bye, Pippin."

She shook off the cold, uneasy strain. She came to him and said impulsively: "What's the difference, Dale? A person can have a friend—a gay, careless friend."

He gave her a long, searching look that brought a flush trembling to her eyes. Her held her with the dark, intent ardor of his gaze.

Then he smiled and said simply as though adding to the unspoken tumult in his mind: "But I've given you enough for one day, haven't I? You'll be my gay, careless friend? Thanks, you're sweet."

Pippin waved to him. She felt like weeping.

Cabin Closed

For two days she didn't meet him. On the third, she passed his lagoon. He was sitting there, sketching. He called out, "Hello there!" and turned immediately to his work.

She felt rebuffed. She felt cold and alone.

The next day Dale's cabin was closed up. It looked forlorn as she felt. She was burningly aware of his absence and of a longing for him.

At nights she wandered down to the pier and sat against the gray chill mountains. The dark and the silence came against her in long, pulsing waves. The stars looked high and brightly cold.

She thought starkly: "There's nothing!"

Her whole life seemed empty. None of the lovely sweet romance she had craved would now be hers. Everything swept away—everything empty.

She felt hard; she felt cold with defiance.

He returned. She saw the door of his cabin open. Her whole being tingled. A glow of happiness, so sudden, so complete that it brought astonished tears to her eyes, swept over her. He was there! He was sitting on a rock.

She went with a little, swift excitement and stood at his side. "Where have you been? Why did you go so mysteriously?"

He saw the flush and pleasure in her face. He got up and took her hand. He lead her down to the water where the trees hid them.

"Pippin! You missed me?"

"Of course!"

"You were lonely? You wanted me back?"

Glad to See Him

"Well—naturally."

"I've been to the city. I had to see about it. It will be quickly settled. A contest is futile in view of the clear proof I have."

"I'm glad."

"Pippin—your eyes are shining, Pippin, you've never looked like this before. Darling—"

"Don't—why are you so excited?"

"Seeing you again and that you're glad. Good Lord, you're glad!" His arms circled her waist. He crossed his hands and drew her to him. "I didn't hope for this. I've been wild thinking about you. Longing for you. How can I wait a year? I'll go quite mad!"

She saw his eyes glow as his face lowered to hers, saw the red of his lips and murmured faintly: "Let me go—Dale, don't—"

"You can't go—I'm holding you—"

She felt weak and swayed against him, taking the kisses that streamed warmly across her face . . .

"I won't see you any more . . . Please—"

He released her slowly, but holding to her hands. She felt the need of strength. Her pulses ebbed in a half-falting dream.

"Don't say you won't see me, Pippin. You will."

"Don't make it so hard for me."

She was again drawn to his arms . . . "I won't make it hard, Pippin, I wouldn't hurt you . . . I wouldn't do a thing in the world to hurt you. I want to make you glad. Love doesn't hurt. It makes you better. It fills your life—darling!"

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Interesting Play

When a partnership at Bridge reaches a Small Slam contract and is faced by the Opening lead with the certainty of a loser in one suit, and when there seems to be nothing better than a finesse for the Slam trick, the chances of making the contract do not appear bright. However, there are many ways in which the cards can be played. Often a trick can be developed that does not appear possible at first glance.

In the hand below, which was played by George U. Harris in a recent game at a leading New York club, Mr Harris found a way to fulfill what appeared to be an impossible contract:

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A 6 ♡ K J 6 ◇ K Q 10 7 4 2 ♣ Q 4
♠ 9 8 5 3 ♡ 10 8 7 3 ◇ 9 ♣ 8 7 5 3	North West East South	♠ K 10 7 2 ♡ 9 5 4 2 ◇ 8 ♣ K J 10 9
	♠ Q J 4 ♡ A Q ◇ A J 6 5 3 ♣ A 6 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	5 ◇ (1)	Pass
6 ◇ (2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North reasoned that with his fine fit in diamonds it was useless to temporize—hence the game bid at once. This decision might have proved unfortunate, but, as a matter of fact, North did not particularly desire to avoid a Slam if South's holding warranted it.

2—Mr. Harris, with three Aces and honors in every suit, felt that he could make splendid use of any of North's honor strength. The Four-Five No-trump convention was not available because of North's Jump to five diamonds.

West's Opening lead was the club 8, which Mr. Harris correctly read as a "top of nothing" lead. He felt that it indicated the location of the King in the East hand. Thus reasoning, he did not consider it worth while to put up the Queen, but won the first trick in his own hand with the Ace. He decided to play the hand on such a basis that if the King of clubs was located in the East hand it would be unnecessary for him to take the spade finesse.

After winning the first club with the Ace, Mr. Harris laid down a round of diamonds, and then cashed his three good, hearts. On the last heart he discarded a club. After the heart tricks had been cashed, the Queen of clubs was led, and East was forced to lead. Whatever choice he made at this point was hopeless as the lead of another club would permit the discard of the losing spade in Dummy and the lead of a spade would give Mr. Harris the two tricks in that suit he wanted, whereas the lead of another heart would also permit the discard of a loser in Dummy.

Tomorrow's Hand

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ K 8 6 5 4 2 ♡ 8 ◇ K 4 ♣ J 10 8 2
♠ A Q ♡ Q 9 3 2 ◇ Q J 3 ♣ K 7 6 3	North West East South	♠ 9 7 3 ♡ A K J 7 6 ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ A Q
	♠ J 10 ♡ 10 5 4 ◇ A 9 7 6 5 ♣ 9 5 4

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

DILL CHARGES LOBBY TO BALK 'PHONE QUIZ

By EUGENE CADOU
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today prepared to decide whether a searchlight will be directed into the affairs of the largest public utility in the world.

Senator Dill (Dem.), of Washington, sought a committee decision on his resolution authorizing a Senate investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

As the committee began its session, Senator Dill charged the A. T. & T. had exerted pressure to prevent the inquiry, saying:

"Company representatives have talked to a number of members of the committee and they even sent men to work on me."

His resolution would direct the committee or any duly authorized sub-committee to conduct the inquiry and report the facts ascertained with recommendations for legislation. A maximum appropriation of $25,000 would finance the investigation.

One topic of inquiry would be what the resolution describes as "methods whereby the company or its subsidiaries or affiliates of its officers or directors have sought through propaganda, or the expenditure of money or the control of channels of publicity, to influence or control public opinion or elections."

Other subjects, as outlined by the resolution, include:

Extent to which its holding company structure enables it to evade regulation or taxation.

Expansion into teletype service, telephoto service, broadcasting, motion picture distribution and the manufacture of electrical equipment.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS :: By PAUL MALLON

Backslapping Now Popular In Congress

WASHINGTON, May 24.—You cannot believe what you hear from Washington. As an instance, it now appears that the wrath of the administration will not descend, as advertised, upon the heads of all rebellious Democratic Congressmen.

Speaker Rainey has, in fact, quietly been striking names off his secret black-list so fast that there are few left.

One of the names on it was that of a semi-southern Democrat. Early in the session, he was bitter against the Rainey-Byrnes leadership and frequently opposed Roosevelt legislation.

The other day, he made a public statement of praise for Speaker Rainey and almost immediatly he was appointed to a juicy position on the Democratic patronage committee.

ANOTHER PRODIGAL

A Democrat from a Pacific Coast state fared even better. He was the Number 1 man on the original blacklist.

Recently he paid tribute to the gr-r-reat Rainey-Byrnes generalship in a speech from the floor. Soon thereafter, Floor Leader Byrnes wrote him a letter strongly approving him for re-election.

HOOPLA

The backslapping has replaced backbiting so extensively that Mr Rainey recently appeared in the sound movie news reels with a first-term Democrat from Montana. Floor Leader Byrnes wrote another letter covering four pages of the Congressional Record (cost of the government estimated at $55 per page) praising a Gulf States Democratic Congressman. A Texas representative is using letters from both Rainey and Byrnes saying how good he is. In answer to an inquiry from the Middle West, Rainey also publicly approved a congresswoman, although she had "opposed the administration on veterans' legislation."

Such tactics are extremely unusual in advance of the primaries. These Congressmen are 'not' running for re-election , ..t, but only fo rrenomination as De..ocrats.

The participation of Mr. ..rnes is even more extraordinary because he is chairman of the Democratic congressional compaign committee, which keeps out of the primaries and acts only after Democratic nominations have been made.

CO-OPERATION

When the House was in revolt on veterans' restorations, pay cuts and other matters, an impression was created by the party leaders that the revolters were going to be made to suffer. Aspiring young Democrats out through the country thought that afforded a splendid opportunity for them to get elected to Congress. They announced themselves in great numbers as opponents of sitting Congressmen on the ground that those now holding office did not stand with President Roosevelt.

As a result, the Congressmen have been running to Rainey and Byrnes on their hands and knees, asking for statements of approval.

When the bars were let down, nearly all the wolves had to be given sheep's clothing.

Underlying it all is the fact that both the House and the Senate have a certain cameraderie and club-like atmosphere on the inside.

SILVER

The silverites were not as enthusiastic about their new silver bill as they pretended, although it was exactly what Mr. Roosevelt promised them weeks ago.

Floor Leader Robinson picked Senator Key Pittman to introduce the bill in the Senate, because Pittman has been the only silverite with whom the administration has worked closely. The final draft came from the Treasury and White House, where the administration worked it out in conference with all the silver group.

One silver enthusiast, in his despair, described it in the cloakroom as "a rim-less zero." Another said:

"It authorizes them to do something for silver when and if they want to."

MOTIVES

The reasons for such feelings are numerous. One is there are just as many different kinds of silverites as there are mosquitoes Each likes a little different kind of meat. For instance, the main reason Senator Thomas has been so active for silver is that he wants to get that issue out of the way so we can have some real inflation.

Another reason is that the silverites doubt if the administration will carry out the flexible mandate of the act as enthusiastically as they would like. They noticed that the administration has lately placed stress on the international aspects of the program.

If they wait until they get an international silver agreement they will wait a long time. Otherwise, they might be able to establish the 25 per cent silver base in 30 years.

CLEANUP DRIVE LAUNCHED BY CLUBWOMEN

Congress of Clubs Back Campaign, Call on Council's Aid

A drive for a cleaner and brighter Pittsburgh is being started today.

The campaign, launched by the Congress of Women's Clubs, is aimed at ridding city streets of dirt and litter and at enforcement of ordinances prohibiting defacement of public property.

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston has had a similar campaign of his own in mind, and will take measures soon for a complete clean-up of city streets, particularly in the Hill District, where there have been large accumulations of ashes and rubbish.

The Civic Pride Committee, composed of local clubwomen, talked with City Council yesterday to plan the drive. A meeting of city officials was scheduled for May 31 at which the women will be present.

DIRECTOR OF DRIVE

Directing the drive is Miss Mary P. Lang, founder of the Brighton Women's Club and sister of former Public Works Director Edward G. Lang.

The Congress of Clubs, representing 12,000 women in the Pittsburgh district, is firmly behind the clean-up campaign, according to Miss Lang. She said:

"It's in our power to make Pittsburgh a more pleasant place in which to live. Such campaigns have had splendid success in other cities, and I'm sure we can accomplish much here if the public will work with us."

The drive is to continue until the city has been swept clean, according to Miss Lang.

Success in the city, she believes, will lead to similar movements in the boroughs.

AIMS OF DRIVE

1—Barring of handbill passers from busy street corners.

2—Enforcement of the ordinance against spitting on sidewalks and throwing rubbish into the street.

3—Compulsory covering of garbage and rubbish trucks.

4—Action against persons who dump bundles of advertising literature on public or private grounds.

Miss Lang told Council that garbage wagons were going about North Side streets without covers.

She announced that efforts will be made through the office of the City Solicitor to prosecute violators of city ordinances referring to the condition of streets.

FIRST LADY AIDS SYMPHONY

Workers in the campaign of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society seeking $100,000, were cheered today by reassuring telegrams from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, and Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in her telegram to Mrs. William Maclay Hall, president of the Symphony Society, said:

"I hope that your campaign to raise funds will be successful and that you will be able to continue the splendid work of the symphony orchestra."

Stock praised the Pittsburgh orchestra and cited its importance to the cultural life.

Approximately $25,000 has been raised.

Civic Playhouse Names Committee

The Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse announces that the general committee for its 1934 summer season has been selected.

Members are Mrs. K. W. Todd, James W. Macfarlane, Martha Jamison Arnold, Arista E. Fisher, Eloise Campbell, Madeline Skelly Foust, Henry Hornbostel, Beatrice Lewis, Richard Rauh, Mrs. Maurice Davis, Harvey B. Gaul, Rosemary Casey, Chester M. Wallace, Mrs. C. B. Watkins, Elmer Kenyon and Mrs. Evan Jones.

Darrow Stirred Up Nest of Hot Bees, Says Baer

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Darrow sure stirred up a nest of hot bees.

Borah, Robinson, Wagner, Nye and Britten are all getting ready to talk about the NRA. Like a hermit cleaning up his whiskers they are brushing up on the subject.

There are two sides to every question. The general will see that Clarence gets the outside.

Darrow's 555-page report loses him the blue eagle. He never completed that in a five-day week.

SNAG TRACTION BAN ON M'NAIR

The boroughs and the Public Service Commission must be called into conference before Mayor McNair is deprived of his power to appoint Traction Board members, according to City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully.

That is the effect of an opinion issued by Solicitor Scully in regard to an ordinance proposed by William A. Magee which would amend the Traction Conference Board agreement to put the power in Council to appoint the city's two representatives.

Magee's measure would designate Charles A. Finley and Ralph E. Smith as the present city members and would put a stop to the long procession of traction board candidates sent to Council by the Mayor.

Scully states that since the traction agreement includes various municipalities in Allegheny County with the city, the Philadelphia Company and the Pittsburgh Railways Company, it cannot be amended except by common consent.

FIGHT SECRECY IN GUN BUYING

A private conference between Council and officials of the Department of Public Safety on the proposed purchase of anti-riot equipment has failed to materialize, because of the refusal of some of the Councilmen to take part in a closed meeting.

Called yesterday by Council President Robert Garland at the request of Safety Director A. Marshall Bell, the meeting designed to purchase new guns for the police failed to develop as scheduled in the Mayor's conference room.

Councilmen John J. Kane and Thomas J. Gallagher, Democrats, asked that the meeting be held "in the open."

AMERICA BANK, STATE DISCUSS REOPENING

Gordon Told Deposit Insurance to Speed Claim Payments

An early move to reorganize the Bank of America Trust Company was expected today as a sequel to a conference between State Banking Secretary William D. Gordon and a group composed mainly of officers and directors of the institution.

The bank is now on a restricted basis.

Reorganization of the bank, it was said, would release approximately $1,157,000 to depositors.

Dr. Gordon said he expected to meet the committee again next week or early in the following week. At that time a decision of future steps will be made.

Dr. Gordon stated he had been assured by officers of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation that they would not require the usual six months' proof of claim by depositors but would act at once to pay all deposits under $2,500.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation guarantees all deposits under $2,500. It was said that all but about $22,000 of the deposits in the bank will be fully guaranteed by deposit insurance. The bank has been operating on a restricted basis since April 20, when its president, W. P. Ortale, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $106,700.

HOLDS PERFECT BRIDGE HAND

To the list of those few individuals who have experienced the thrill of drawing a perfect bridge hand add the name of Mrs. Frank B. Smith, of 220 Martin avenue, Dormont.

Mrs. Smith drew 13 spades while playing yesterday at a bridge club assembly in the home of Mrs. W. H. Busch, of 451 Mapleton avenue, Mt. Lebanon.

Mrs. Smith modestly admits she made the top score at auction.

MR. FORD, INSPECTING HIS FOSTER HOMESTEAD PURCHASE, RECEIVING A GIFT BOOK FROM STUDENT JOHN M'GUIRE, 16

FOSTER BIRTHPLACE PROVED, FORD DECLARES HERE

Ignores Claims of McNair; Work of Razing Begun

Henry Ford is satisfied that the century-old home he has purchased at 3414 Penn avenue is the birthplace of Stephen C. Foster.

The motor-car magnate ended the controversy over the composer's birthplace, as far as he is concerned, yesterday, when he personally supervised the start on dismantling the old homestead for removal to his collection of early American homes at Dearborn, Michigan.

Ford, in an interview with the Sun-Telegraph, denied he had returned to Pittsburgh because of Mayor McNair's contentions that he had purchased the wrong cottage.

IGNORES McNAIR

Ford insisted he had not heard of Mayor McNair's claims, and said he would have paid no attention if he had.

When Ford was asked:

"Then you're satisfied you have acquired Foster's birthplace?"

He replied:

"We're taking it down, aren't we?"

After a day of dodging reporters while he made numerous trips to and from the cottage, and conferred with George S. Davison, whose family was a neighbor of Foster's, Ford finally consented to the interview.

He said:

"For the last five months, ever since we first started investigating the birthplace of William H. McGuffey, which I recently acquired, we have been conducting research into the Foster birthplace.

"From what we have found and from what we have learned from Mr. Davison and others, we purchased the cottage here.

"We intend to restore it as nearly as possible to its original condition.

"The two rear rooms, which were added in 1860 or thereabouts, long after Foster's birth in 1826, we will leave behind.

WINDOWS DISCARDED

"We will remove the two dormer windows from the roof which also were added some time after Foster's birth.

"The stairway, now in the lower hall, will be removed to its original place in the original back room.

"The cottage and woodwork will be painted in white, the original colors."

While Ford talked, a corps of workmen was busy removing all the plaster, packing it in sacks and loading it on trucks to be taken immediately to Dearborn.

Dust filled the cottage as Mr. Ford and the reporter went through the rooms while the motor magnate pointed out the early American workmanship, the crude plaster, the wood-working and similar things which struck his fancy. He continued:

"We learned that the house was built about 1812, and you know that Foster was born in 1826 on the day that Jefferson and Adams died."

The reporter was anxious to learn how long it would take to dismantle the house, to which Ford replied, chuckling:

ARCHITECT ON WAY

He revealed that his architect and expert on reassembling homes would arrive today to speed up the work.

As to the flurry caused by Ford's purchase of the cottage, the magnate recalled his purchase of the court house at Lincoln, Ill., where Abraham Lincoln practiced law. Explaining, he said:

"That court house was built in 1830 and stood there with the community virtually unmindful of the fact that Lincoln practiced there from 1830 to 1848. When I stepped in and bought it, some folks raised a hue and cry. You have to get used to that."

Ford plans to furnish the Foster home with furniture of the early American period, he said, and will take with him an early square piano among the furnishings of the cottage.

SCHOOLBOY'S GIFT

During the afternoon, John McGuire, a 16-year-old graduate of Central Catholic High School, who lives at 3436 Penn avenue, appeared at the cottage and sought to see Ford.

When Ford learned the youth wanted to present him with an antique book, published in 1793, yellowed with age, he called the lad to him.

John eagerly handed the old tome to the multimillionaire, as Ford said:

"Thank you, young man. Now give me your name and I'll send you a book, too."

John did.

The book, written by one Usebius Nuremburg, was titled: "A Treatise on the Difference Between the Temporal and the Eternal."

Ford left Pittsburgh last night to attend a farmers' dinner, and when asked what kind of a dinner that would be, he said, evidently amused:

CHARLES SLATER AND HIS CLOCK TOWER MODEL . . . STUDENTS WOULD LIKE TO BUILD IT.

Tech Students Design, To Erect Bell Tower

A bell and clock tower, 80 feet high, will be erected on the Carnegie Tech campus if present student committee plans for raising its cost of $30,000 are successful.

The design chosen is the work of Charles Slater, a junior in the department of architecture, who won first prize in an informal competition among architectural students for the best composition.

A preliminary model which he expects to complete this week shows the tower as a square shaft about 23 feet wide at the base. In its general appearance, with walls of white brick, the structure will harmonize with present campus buildings.

Slater's estimate of $30,000 as the tower's cost includes a set of four bells as Westminster chimes for a huge four-faced clock, which would be imported from England. Its dial, 11 feet in diameter, will be visible from all parts of the Tech campus.

Tech students, according to present plans, would do much of the work of construction on the tower, even the manufacture of some of the clock mechanism, as part of their courses. Decorations of sculpture and painting are to be the work of Tech art students.

Edmund McCormick and Rosemary Saxton, student committee members, report that construction will start next year. Both students and alumni will be asked to contribute to the building fund.

COMMISSIONERS TOLD YOUTHS GUILTLESS

Grant Sum for 3-Month Investigation Among Imprisoned

A slashing attack on squires, constables and railroad police who rushed nearly 3,000 youths into the county jail during 1933 for "social violations" such as trespass and disorderly conduct and vagrancy, in order to get the costs or for "gratification," was flayed today by Common Pleas Judges and County Commissioners.

The Commissioners approved an appropriation of $375 to enable the judges to place a social worker in the county jail to investigate the youths incarcerated there, after Judges James H. Gray and Elder W. Marshall appeared before the Commissioners.

PICKED OFF RAILROADS

Judge Gray declared:

"There are too many young men sent to jail for the purposes of costs. They're not criminals at all. I interviewed four of the finest looking young men in their cells not long ago, and found they were four Civilian Conservation Corps boys on their way home, and had been picked off the railroads and placed there. I got them discharged, finally. But in 1933, about 3,000 young men spent time in the jail."

Judge Marshall interrupted:

"Mostly on charges such as trespass, disorderly conduct, vagrancy. Some of these youths may be social problems, but certainly committed no crimes.

'The majority are boys that were picked up and rushed to jail so that the arresting officers could get the costs. Many come from the railroad centers. The county is forced to keep them, is housing thousands simply for the gratification of squires and constables."

FROM 75 MUNICIPALITIES

And Commissioner C. M. Barr interpolated:

"And railroad bulls."

Judge Gray agreed and asked for authority to appoint the social worker to do research in the jail for three months, at $125 a month. The Commissioners agreed.

Judge Gray then submitted an analysis of the young men incarcerated in 1933, which showed:

That 2,758 youths between the ages of 16 and 25 years were summary conviction prisoners and of these 669 were sent to Parkview, the county jail farm.

That they were sent from 75 municipalities—1,414 came from Pittsburgh, 116 from Braddock, 85 from Carnegie, 324 from East Pittsburgh, 91 from Pitcairn, 254 from Sharpsburg, 37 from Wilmerding, 29 from Wilkins Township, 28 from Ingram, 22 from McKees Rocks and 32 from McKeesport—a total of 2,432 of the 2,758 incarcerated.

ONE TO 30-DAY TERMS

They were given terms ranging from one to 30 days—1,085 getting 10 days, 258 got 30 days, 237 got 20 days, 66 got 15 days, 880 got five days.

And the most numerous offenses were 712 for trespass, 462 for disorderly house, 417 for vagrancy, 223 for suspicious person, 137 for drunkenness, 117 for violating automobile code and 91 for violating municipal ordinance.

During the same period, 282 youths between 16 and 25 years served court case terms, mostly all convictions for felonies.

The average time served before trial was 20 days, the report declared, but there were cases where the waiting period totaled 162, 141, 113, 111 and down to one day.

Young men sent to Huntingdon in 1933 totaled 58, and to Morganza, 48. The per capita cost at Huntingdon was $1.119, at Morganza, $1.23, and in the Allegheny County Jail, 46 cents a day.

County Controller Robert G. Woodside's office furnished the figures in the report.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, the Sun-Telegraph.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 24.

Not long ago ex-ambassador to Germany, Jimmie Gerard, said there was 50 men running the country. Now they say they have let 49 of em go. So naturally we have those 49 ex-country runners, all on our hands and dissatisfied. You cant let people out, no matter for what good reason, and have them go away bragging on you. I dont suppose there is any business with as many unemployed as the "advising" business. What gets these big fellows goat is, Rooseveit listens to 'em all, but they cant tell whether he is paying any attention or not.

Yours, WILL.

PRESBYTERIANS OPEN MEETING IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, May 24.—(AP.)—After hearing Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes liken the principle of the New Deal to the Golden Rule, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. opened its formal sessions today.

A sermon asserting Christianity should guide the world to a Christian solution of its social and economic problems, opened the asscembly.

Moderaton John McDowell, of New York City, delivered the sermon only a few hours before his scheduled retirement from office and the eletcion of his successor—principle business of the opening session. The moderator said:

"The Supreme need of the present time is for Christian chrches with the wisdom, the courage, and the conscience requisite to guide the Christian forces of the country and the world in making a thorough application of the principles of Jesus Christ to the individual, the social, the economic, the national and international life of the day."

"Christianity is something more than a Gospel," he said. e "Christianity is a law as wellas a Gospel. And the Christian law faithfully preached as the foundation of the Gospel will put an end to many of our troubles."

Secretary Ickes, speaking last night, asserted:

"The New Deal is grounded on the theory that one should do unto others what he would that others should do unto him."

Ickes criticised vested interests which, he said, regard the church as "an instrument for their own personal aggrandizement," adding that "God, to their way of thinking, is on the side of the largest contributors."

Injured Landlady Clears Boarder

A boarder was discharged today by Magistrate Howard B. McNutt in North Side Police Court after being held as a material witness in an accident in which his landlady received serious injuries.

The landlady, Mrs. Marie Schellhaas, now in the Presbyterian Hospital, told police she had fallen down the stairs of her home, 820 East Diamond street, and said the boarder, Edwin J. Thomas, 30, had nothing to do with the fall.

FAZIO PONDERS APPEAL

Philip Fazio, Swissvale beer garden proprietor, convicted late yesterday in the bombing of the home of Dr. George C. Seitz, Swissvale councilman, was considering today whether to move for a new trial, or submit himself for sentence by Judge Samuel H. Gardner.

The maximum penalty would be 10 to 20 years in prison.

Fazio and Nick Consolo, Wilkinsburg youth, were found guilty of possession and transportation of explosives and not guilty of intent to destroy Dr. Seitz's house and do him bodily harm.

The jury recommended mercy for Consolo.

When Attorney William H. Coleman asked for the men's release under their present $10,000 bail, pending motion for a new trial, Assistant District Attorney Earl R. Jackson demanded the bail be doubled.

Judge Gardner then remanded them to jail under $20,000 bail each.

Ickes Defends NRA During Stop Here

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes' faith in the National Recovery Act is unwavering, despite the scathing attack on the NRA program, Ickes said today at the County Airport.

The Secretary, returning to Washington by plane after a trip to Cleveland, is administrator of the petroleum code. He said:

"The NRA program is sound in principal and should succeed. I have not read the Darrow report as yet, and so could not comment on it intelligently."

RWD TO BUILD OHIO ROAD

A two-mile extension of the Ohio River boulevard, from Haysville station to Chestnut street, Sewickley, will be relocated and constructed by Allegheny County and the Relief Works Division, it was announced today.

James L. Stuart, RWD director, told the County Commissioners that the project would be completed, as far as his part was concerned, if he had to drop all others.

The county appropriated $100,000 and the RWD $80,000.

Edward L. Schmidt, planning engineer, explained that the new road will be built for the most part along the former railroad level, and will extend to the Beaver County line. Plans are ready, he said, and work will begin within a few days. About 200 men will be employed.

Stuart also informed the commissioners that approval had been secured for the Natrona Heights road, which still requires surfacing and draining.

In Harrisburg they will be joined by 150 delegates from other parts of the state and will present their demands to Eric H. Biddle, State Emergency Relief Board head they announced.

The councils, which are headed here by Phil Frankfeld, alleged Communist, will ask for stopping of evictions through adoption of the Pittsburgh plan of the state paying taxes and water bills of landlords, their leaders said.

GYPSIES WEEP BEFORE BIER OF QUEEN

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER
Universal Service.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 24.—A queen lies dead here today. Folded in a rare Spanish shawl and half covered with flowers, her body lies in state on the couch that was her throne.

But Queen Mary Ulfi's domain was a comic-opera kingdom that existed only in the imagination of her subjects. She was a gypsy whose palace was a one-room store in a Brooklyn slum with a ragged red quilt hung across the window and a broken-down bench on the curb for a court.

Tuesday night Queen Mary, who came here from Serbia 35 years ago, stood in the door of her store as two "gorgios" loitered into the district and picked a quarrel with her youngest son, Prince Tach. She upbraided the intruders and they ran away, but a half hour later she was dead. The doctors say she had heart trouble and the excitement killed her.

Early this morning members of the clan she ruled began to gather from all parts of the East. They drove flivvers, trucks and a few limousines bearing Illinois, Indiana, Georgia and Massachusetts license plates, over the broken pavement of Fleet street and parked in a solemn line.

Seven daughters and seven sons of Queen Mary and her husband, King Tacho, gathered around the youngest girl, Princess Anna, and kept time with their shoulders to the weird rhythm when Anna sobbed out her sorrow in an eerie chant.

Catholic Church Gift Of United Presbyterian

J. SCOTT WALKER, 72 . . . . . HE GAVE THE LOT AND STONE

First Edifice of Kind Being Erected at Walker's Mills

Thanks to J. Scott Walker, 72, a United Presbyterian Church member, the inhabitants of Walker's Mill will have a Catholic church in which to worship this fall.

Walker, a retired miller and son of the village's founder, donated a lot along the Noblestown road, on which the church is now being built. Stone used in the construction has been furnished from his quarry.

Since the little town was laid out by Isaac Walker in the 1860's, devout Catholics have walked more than two miles to worship in the churches of Carnegie.

Labor is being done by the villagers, who expect to complete the edifice within two months.

Walker commented:

"It doesn't hurt to give a little no matter what you are."

Along with the revival of the theater (one proof of which is the growing number of amateur theatrical groups) comes the revival of play writing.

Among Pittsburgh socialite play writers Mrs. Newton Chapin, Rosemary Casey and Mrs. Kirkland Wiley Todd lead.

And now this playwriting urge has spread to the very young.

Among the fourth and fifth grade pupils at the Colonial School on Murray avenue, one of our private schools, who've written short sketches—and in French!—is little Sally Rafferty. Her work is entitled "Les Bon Bons." Mme. Marguerite Owens has directed this play writing in French.

And Charlotte Anne Steffey and Katherine Kennedy are the authors of two plays the seventh grade will produce.

Youngsters to Give Plays Tomorrow

Both these plays and "Hansel and Gretel," which has been, if possible, even more popular this year with children, will be given, together with dances, by young pupils of Colonial School at open-house day tomorrow.

"Hansel and Gretel" will be given in dance pantomime under the supervision of Genevieve Jones Allen.

The program will close with a play in which the actors will be Clement and Mary Eliza Brown, Lucille Laporte, Grace Schroeder, Mary Belle Langfitt, Phyllis Lockhart and Mary Jane Meyer.

At noon tomorrow a buffet luncheon will be served at which the guests will be members of the graduating class and their parents.

Dr. and Mrs. Mullins Going to Dublin

A Pittsburgh doctor will take his young wife to visit his Alma Mater—the University of Dublin. And his pretty young wife, who was Virginia Murphy, daughter of the Bert L. Murphys, of Murray avenue, before her marriage several years ago in St. Paul's Cathedral, will probably see the home of some of her ancestors during her visit to Ireland.

Dr. and Mrs. Mullins will sail Saturday on the Bremen for a month's tour of England and Ireland. They plan to see the English Derby, tour a bit of England, and then to Ireland, where Dr. Mullins will show his wife familiar scenes of his childhood and youth.

The Joseph K. Loves, of Johnstown, are guests at the Greenbriar Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, where they plan to pay a long visit.

Senior Dinner At P. C. W. Tonight

Tomorrow night the annual evening musical recital, by students in the music department, will be given. It will be open to the public. The program has been arranged by Ralph Lewando, teacher of violin; Miss Helene Welker, piano instructor; Miss Helen Keill, voice, and Miss Alice Goodell, organ.

Saturday, the spring dances will take place all over the campus, both Berry and Woodland Hall being used.

The senior play, which will be part of the commencement week activities at the college, is "The Torchbearers," by George Kelly. It will be given June 6 and 7 in an interesting modern setting of green and silver, designed by James Lindsay, formerly of Carnegie Tech, who collaborates on much of the dramatic work at P. C. W.

THROUGH THE SPYGLASS

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

What with fabrics and foods getting mixed up together these days as they do, one can almost expect to be eating gingham steaks and polkadot pie . . . we've already had "chiffon pie" . . . "velvety cheese" and such.

And this time it's Chiffon Butter! Butter, of all things . . . has taken unto itself an airy-fairy-lillian type of consistency . . . a light and fluffy "whipped" characteristic that calls to mind sweet visions of waffles and maple syrup . . . "hard sauce" and so on.

Remember how (when you wanted to be extra snooty) you took some plain everyday butter and-beat-it-and-beat-it until it became all light and feathery? That . . amplified several hundred times . . . is this new butter! It goes further than the average type (because it melts and spreads better) . . . it has more actual butter to the half pound package (which is how it comes packed) because it weighs lighter than the common variety . . . and it's easier to work with in cooking (creaming into cakes, etc.) In salted or unsalted type. Try it!

* * *

What to give the bride . . . question! Pondering! (Oh, dear . . . "this bridal business is thrilling but expensive"), most people reflect! And today the $5 and $6 gift is taking the place of many of the former $10 and $15 gifts . . . hence these words . . . hence this chortling . . . hence the news of these stunning new salad bowls that have sprung up in the windows of one of the downtown shops!

Big polished maple bowls firmly fastened to a chrome "plank" of conventionalized design. Their outsides lacquered in red, green, black, or yellow . . . and the chrome bases bear the matching colorings in their scroll-effect ends. Beautiful gifts for any bride . . . useful gifts . . . unbreakable ones . . . and inexpensive ones . . . $6.00.

* * *

After having heard a man complain the other day . . . "why don't you have anything for the men in your column?" . . . we decided to dig up a thing or two for "youse guys" and offer it with a deep bow.

For we crossed the threshold of the men's furnishings in one of the stores and hunted up our boy friend there . . . and now behold the news that one of the smartest things for a smartster of masculine persuasion to wear is—

The Ascot Shirt! Being created in li'l old New York by none other than that old smoothie, Russell Patterson (what! you haven't heard of Russell!) and priced for the snatch-up-able price here of $1.95. In basketweave . . . blue, peach . . . white . . . for golfing and riding and whatnoting 'round all summer long. With the Ascot going flop right up against your manly Adam's Apple.

* * *

And then there are those solid deep-color handkerchiefs that were $1 each until recently, when someone up and took a crack at them and knocked them flat . . . to 3 for $1 or 35c each if you must know.

Handrolled edges . . . French batiste . . . in grand smart new colors like navy, dark brown, grey, green, black, purple, wine and yellow. Very, very swank for all He's . . . and a thought for graduation ceremonies.

Equal Rights Federation Subject

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 24.—(AP.)—With five of the major subjects of the program covered in discussions and resolutions, the sixteenth council meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs today turned to consideration of the equal rights amendment as it continued study of controversial public questions.

Birth control, sterilization, crime prevention, temperance and the Copeland food and drug bill already have been brought before the delegates in reports and addresses. Public old-age pensions will be considered at tomorrow's session as the week-long meeting closes with presentation of candidates for office.

Discussion of the equal rights amendment was presented by Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, of Washington, on the affirmative side, with Mrs. Jerome E. Cook, of Missouri, as her opponent.

The delegates last night heard Joseph B. Keenan, assistant attorney general, declare that more efficient administration and execution is needed rather than laws in this country as he compared homicide rates in the United States with those of England and Wales.

The council yesterday indorsed the general purpose and principle of the Copeland bill, now before Congress and designed to extend the scope of drug and food laws.

The meeting also unanimously approved a resolution opposing return of the saloon and recommending temperance instruction in public schools.

In discussing birth control, Dr. Charles Francis Potter, of New York, urged that the matter be included in the program of study for all clubs. Dr. Theodore H. Aschman, of Kansas City, opponent, contended that it should be under control of the medical profession.

Concerning sterilization, a plea for enactment of selective laws that "will limit parenthood among the great army of defectives whose perpetuation spells only misery and woe for themselves and constitutes a growing menace to society" was made in a report to the council by Mrs. George Thomas Palmer, Chicago, chairman of the Illinois legislative committee.

Emphasis on sports was deplored in a report of the education department submitted by Mrs. Fred L. Pigeon, of Boston.

DANCING WHEN DAY IS DONE

By PRUNELLA WOOD

The gown sketched here is a flattering cloud of black net which nevertheless has a definite silhouette despite its softness. It is the horizontal tucking which puts it over, permitting a clever moulding about the hips and the opportunity of a Spanish flounce which flares dramatically.

The shoulder straps are very modest indeed, and the back decollete is almost nil. But the frippery capelet, cut on huge-me-tight lines, conceals all this naked expanse attractively till well after sundown, when true elegance is in good taste. The capelet does not fasten at all—it's simply slipped into in the manner of a bolero.

THE SEASON of warm weather revels at the country clubs of the country is almost upon us. Daylight saving has already arrived, so we are up against these two summer style problems right now.

There is a new note in frocks which will fit in to the scheme attractively. Although they are primarily intended for dancing costumes, and are carefully provided with some sort of shoulder covering which conceal a deep decolletage before real night time, 1934 has borrowed some very formal colors to use for them. The black, the navy blue, the very dark brown or dark green of winter elegance in on the up and up for the soft, semi-formal dinner dresses of the moment, in diaphanous materials of inexpensive nature.

COTTON NET, frou frou or tailored, plain colored or printed with practically tie silk designs, organza striped with narrow lines much like the patterns and colors of old-fashioned peanut sacks at the circus, plaid gingham in strange tints of plum and slate, or brown and purple, are some of the other fancies for frocks suitable to gala nights in the neighborhood.

Ultimatum

With all the wisdom of their narrowed eyes;
They watch our Spring—await the shadowed Fall
The moon grows cold, they claim, the flowers fade,
A cool breeze stirs from off a misty shore,
While two who laugh at rout will grow afraid

For warnings, thanks, all dull embittered friends—
But we have found a moon that will not chill,
The perfume of our flowers never ends,
A warm breeze stirs for us and always will . . ,
(And, Heartbreak House, the rooms you sweep and air Should not be held—for we will not be there!)

—Don Wahn.

Gag

The producers of Damon Runyon's 4-star movie delight, "Little Miss Marker," invited the various sports writers and sportsmen in town to see it. The hard-boiled gents actually wept when the movie ended, so touching is it.

Jimmy Johnston, the fight promoter at the Garden, was weeping next to Damon.

"Why are you crying?" asked the author.

"It was so sad," was the reply.

How to Get Dizzy

The Question Box on a local movie page contained this:

Izzy Elinsonisms

I know a Bronx movie owner, who doesn't mind the strikers walking up and down in front of his theater. He says it's nice to have somebody around the place! . . . What the government drive against crime needs most is fewer Congressional reports and more pistol reports . . . The papers state that Rubinoff was divorced years ago charged with cruelty . . . I get it! Rubinoff —and his Violence!

And He Would!

This actually happened the other day. David Stern, the publisher, was in the market for a columnist. One of the Stem's lowest-lifes, who had angled for such a job applied.

"Only $400 a week," said the hamatuer, as he was shown the door.

"Did you get that?" yelled the publisher to his staff. "If that job paid $400 a week I'd take it myself!"

Quietso, Quietso

Olin Miler, of Thomaston, Ga., writes:

"Want to know how to run a weekly newspaper? Just start one and everybody in town will tell you how to run it!"

Street Scene

The other afternoon a columnist was stopped by a former star, who was on an alcoholiday, again.

"Me sleepy," he said between hiccoughs, "how about some money, big man?"

The columnist, who is weary of staking professional grifters, knew he would use the coin for another round at the nearest joint.

"No," refused the columnist, "your sun tan indicates that your golf must be good—and, anyway, you're dressed in costlier clothes than I am."

The cronies standing near by, of course, doped the columnist as a cheap skate—which is always better than being laughed at for being an easy touch—which is ritz for "sucker."

THEATER CHAT :-: Entertainment Field From Various Angles :-: PHOTOPLAY NEWS

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Katharine Cornell will end her 17,000-mile tour in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" on June 20 in Brooklyn. And thus a prophecy will be fulfilled which a critic in Richmond, Va., made 15 years ago when he said:

Mr. Seibel.

"Miss Cornell may go a long way."

Walter Hampden is closing his season with "Richelieu," also in Brooklyn, where the critics say that his Richelieu is "still a fresh character," though he has been on the road all season along with the melancholy Hamlet, the murderous Macbeth, and the messianic Manson.

Eva Le Gallienne returned to New York weeks ago, after going far west with two ladies very unlike each other—Hedda and Juliet.

These three have been the standard-bearers of the legitimate theater during the past season. Fritz Leiber has been rusticating in his home at Atlantic Highlands since "Yoshe Kalb" did not please Broadway in English. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne have gone into the producing business—but over in London.

And now about 80 summer theaters are beginning to try out plays for next season. Thus the wheel keeps turning—and the three solitary champions of this year may be a legion by next fall.

While the International Exhibition of Theater Art opens today in the Carnegie Institute, Lee Simonson, who conceived and collected it, will not be here until Monday to give his lecture on the exhibits.

Simonson, who studied painting four years in Paris, did his first scene designing for the Washington Square Players in New York.

Just as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has been revived with great acclaim, though without bloodhounds—even a last-minute effort to get Flush having failed because the Cornell season was not yet ended, another old-time drama is being given in glimpses by the Tech Drama School. "The Two Orphans," associated with the name of Kate Claxton and several theater fires, was last seen here in an all-star revival. Next Monday some scenes will be played in the Union of Carnegie Tech, along with another play by a Pittsburgher.

Cast Cheers Laughton On Set

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 24.—The first appearance of Charles Laughton on the Norma Shearer set touched off a dramatic scene that left the English actor almost without words.

The "Barretts of Wimpole Street" company was in the midst of a take when Laughton slipped unobtrusively onto the stage. Without making his presence known to anyone, the rotund British actor, who won this year's academy award for his performance in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," took up a post behind the camera. He was still there, a few minutes later, when one of the players discovered him.

The business of picture-making temporarily was forgotten. Led by Norma Shearer and Frederic March, the whole company broke into applause. It was a spontaneous and warming tribute to the accomplishment of an Englisman who, in a British made picture, had won Hollywood's highest acting award.

Totally unprepared for the reception, Laughton had to fight several minutes to regain his composure.

Interesting that "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will be the first film in which three award winners are acting in competition. Miss Shearer won first honors for women by her portrayal in "Divorcee" and March was chosen for his memorable "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde."

A Fox company still weak from influenza and laryngitis worked many hours' overtime Sunday so that Louise Fazenda could finish up her part in "Caravan" and hop an airplane to join Hal Wallis in New York. Loretta Young came back from a sick bed and Charles Bover spoke his lines in a voice still husky from laryngitis.

Louise took off that night, but is still in lingering suspence. She has promised to let Eric Charrel know where to reach her every two hours and to be ready, even up to the last minute before she and Hal sail, to return to make any needed retakes.

If all goes well, Louise and Hal will sail on the Paris for a European vacation.

"The story probably isn't true but is too funny to pass up. Its about the showing of "Viva Villa" to certain Mexican authorities. Most of the films met with their approval but they picked on one scene in which Villa manhandled a woman.

A spokesman shook his head,

"You'll have to change that scene," he is said to have objected. "Villa never smoked cigars."

* * *

The Constance Bennett menage also is taking out passports and will head for the Riviera. As usual, Connie is taking her secretary, Gladys Young, and her colored maid, Dora Pinter. The secretary already has made five trips to Europe with the star and Dora is a veteran of ten.

Comedy

Shirley Grey has a leading role in "Twin Husbands," crook comedy drama opening Friday in the Pitt, where the stage offering will be "Harem Frolics."

YOUR THEATER AND MINE :: By KARL KRUG

Joe Penner, called by Lawrence Schwab the finest comedian in America, and the musical play producer wasn't talking for publication at the time, is still befuddled by his unexpected and sudden success. He is also puzzled by the attitude of Broadway audiences toward his special brand of comedy.

The boyish Penner is a riot along the provincial highways, but when he sets foot on the stage of a New York theater his reception, while not lukewarm by any means, is far unlike the box-office traffic jams he creates in the hinterlands. Not that the amiable duck salesman is particularly perturbed by the situation. His ups and downs have been many since he began in burlesque as a youngster, and now that his future financial security is assured, his attitude concerning his Broadway stage appearances is one of nonchalant tolerance.

Joe is not a part of the White Light scene, and probably never will be. He lives quietly at the St Moritz Hotel and pays strict attention, as the saying goes, to business. His hours are regular, he's in love with Mrs. Penner, and he's looking forward with enthusiasm to his first opportunity to work in a feature-length photoplay, Paramount's "The Big Broadcast of 1934," in which one of his co-stars is to be Jessica Dragonette.

WHISPERING GALLERY

"The Blue Angel," which the Pennsylvania Board of Censors hacked up so badly a few years ago that Paramount refused to release it in this state, has finally been passed, but has not been booked by any of the Downtown theaters . . . The chopping of the picture is said to have been extremely heavy . . . Berton Churchill gets his first real screen break in "Half a Sinner," film version of that fine old stage play, "Alias the Deacon," in which he starred . . . Christy Wilbert, former Warner press agent, and the Missus are in town from St. Louis on vacation . . . George Seibel, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph drama critic, goes to New York Friday to see eight plays in eight days . . . A radio preview of "Little Man, What Now" is scheduled for Sunday night . . . It is doubtful if the Alvin will open May 30 as originally planned . . . Bill Beck, assistant Stanley manager, weds Annette May Roland June 6, . . . Harry Brown, of the Nixon, looks for a much heavier drama season next year . . . The preponderance of hits in New York is the basis of his prediction . . . The new Joan Crawford flicker, "Sadie McKee" is an early Penn booking . . . Mary Pickford is considering going into the cosmetic business . . . Guy Lombardo, who opens in the Stanley in person tomorrow, will soon appear in the same theater in his first picture, "Many Happy Returns" . . . A night letter from my old confrere, Florence Fisher Parry, bids me welcome, while two of the better known boys, Monte Proser and Junior McGeehan, of the Manhattan Dawn Patrol, laconically Postal Telegraph, "Okay Baby" . . . A week of revivals, a new one each day, is a possibility in one of the first-run Downtown cinema cathedrals . . . The season past was the best financial one in five years for George Jaffe's Academy . . . Manny Greenwald is looking for a new connection since the close of the United Artists exploitation season . . . Mae West's "It Ain't No Sin," in which George Raft refused to appear, will unfurl itself at the Stanley in a few weeks . . . And, from the "extra" girl comes these words of wisdom: "A girl can learn all the answers by going out with questionable companions." . . . The Louis (Penn chief of service) Hamels will be three in July.

SHADES OF CONFUCIUS

To revive the old custom of your correspondent, that of printing the week's "best" press agent story, the following "classic" is set down exactly as it arrived from the Fox publicity department.

Chinese wisdom has become a habit in his own living with Warner Oland, who gets all the "Charlie Chan" fan mail that reaches Los Angeles post offices these days, and whose latest Chan film, "Charlie Chan's Courage," is now in production at Fox Movietone City. Warner has steeped himself in the old Chinese books of Mencius and Confucius, the great Oriental philosophers, and has found an ancient formula for broiling steaks and chops which works. He calls it the "driftwood broil."

It seems that driftwood picked up on the beaches and soaking perhaps years in the sea bringing emits a particularly rich kind of fire and smoke which lends a most original and deliciously tasty kind of flavor to meat roasted thereby. Hollywood is now talking of Confucian Charlie.

The Last Trick

IN HIS neighborhood, which was far removed from the Astors and the Vanderbilts, he was known as Old Man Schmidt. He had probably carried a first name once upon a time, but he had dropped it in the long ago. For many years he had been known as Old Man Schmidt, and nothing more.

Schmidt was a junk dealer, and I don't mean that he wrote columns. Dirty, ragged, unkempt, he was a constant visitor at the city's dumping grounds, ash cans, and junk piles to see what he could salvage.

You wouldn't think that there would be much of a story in Old Man Schmidt, would you? Well, you'd be right—if it weren't for Joe Schmidt. Joe was the old man's son, and he was the only happiness his father had ever known.

The Old Man was up before dawn each morning, including Sundays. A brown cloth bag over his shoulder, he'd shuffle to the dumping ground or junk pile that was on his schedule for that day.

Promptly at 11, he was home again to look after his little Joe. He'd spend an hour with the kid—and off he'd go again. In the afternoons, Mrs. Muller, the widow in the flat below, would take care of Joe. And the Old Man would always be home at 6 o'clock to spend the rest of his time with the baby.

Sometimes, when the weather was warm, Old Man Schmidt would sit on the tenement steps of an evening and engage in conversation with his neighbors. He never spoke about anything else but his boy.

"That boy of mine's gonna be somethin' some day," he insisted proudly. "He ain't gonna be like me. Not if I got anythin' to say about it. No, sirree.

The boy grew older. He did go to school for a short time, and there wasn't a prouder man in the world than Old Man Schmidt on the morning that his Joe graduated from public school. His father put on a collar that day, and there is even a legend to the effect that he washed his neck. But there's nobody who'll actually swear to it.

Joe entered Stuyvesant High School, but his education ended there after two or three months. The boy took to hanging out with the mob on the corner and shooting pool with the experts. He was only 16 when he was arrested for clipping packages—and they sent him away for six months. Only Old Man Schmidt was broken-hearted, but he was still able to find excuses for his boy.

"My boy didn't really do nothin' wrong," he explained. "He was just mixed up in bum company, that's all. He'll be all right yet. Just you wait and see. No junk and dump piles for my boy. He's too smart."

When Joe was released, he didn't return to his home. He did, however, pay his father and the old neighborhood an occasional visit. And as the time went by, he seemed to be succeeding at his work. Nobody knew what that work was because Joe never even told his father. But judging by appearances he was doing mighty well.

His clothes seemed to be of the best, and he always drove up in a flashy green roadster that attracted the kids from blocks around. He'd insist on slipping Old Man Schmidt a $20 note every time he left—and there was no holding his father after the flashy roadster had disappeared around a corner.

"What'd I tell you?" he'd exult. "Guess Old Man Schmidt knew what he was talkin' about, eh? That was Joe. That was my boy. And in case you didn't know, that was his car.

You will figure, I suppose, that Joe was in a racket of some sort. And you're quite correct. He was a very small shot in the alcohol racket—but he made good money for almost five years. Then he made the mistake of crossing a partner. And the papers told the rest of the story in a few lines.

"The body of Joe Schmidt, small time alky racketeer," was the way most of them described the incident, "was discovered yesterday morning by two laborers on their way to work. There were twenty slugs in the body, and it was found on a barren tract of land that is used by the city for dumping purposes." . . .

Scenes of Chicago Fire In Hearst News

Spectacular pictures of the fire that swept over the stockyards district of Chicago, the worst conflagration since the famous one of 1871, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, with a graphic description by the Globe Trotter. Two thousand firemen vainly try to stem the progress of the fire that rages far into the night.

Exclusive pictures from Belmont Park show the running of the Metropolitan Handicap. They show the tragedy that overtook Chase Me, the unbeaten gelding, who broke his leg on the far turn, hurling Jackey Slate high into the air.

The last chapter for the kidnapers of William F. Gettle, Beverly Hills millionaire, comes when the trio are taken from Los Angeles County Jail to San Quentin to begin their life terms. Walter Naughton, Hearst newspaper reporter, interviews the prisoners.

In Tucson, Ariz., little June Robles tells a group of her playmates who question her the story of her experience of being buried for 19 days by kidnapers.

Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs on time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects of the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

We've sold Bed Spreads and Cannon towels till the cows came home. We've sold curtains at 79c the pair that were a sell-out at a previous 95c. We've sold dresses—Women's dresses—at 3 for $14,—a perfectly huge saving to the smart ones who bought them. We've sold Shelbourne Shirts at 1.15—whew, what a value. PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Which Man Was Rich?" will be presented in the Schenley High School at 8 o'clock this evening by a Negro cast, under the auspices of the Shiloh Baptist Church, of which the Rev. Dr. D. B. Russell is pastor. It is being staged under the direction of the author, Dr. Ralph Mark Gilbert, of South Bend., Ind., who wrote the Negro Passion Play that was shown here in February. The basis of his new play is the reaction of three young men to the purpose of life, one having wealth as his ideal, another, pleasure, and the third, service. The idea is treated with the racial imaginativeness of the Negro, rather than along conventional dramatic lines, we have been informed, thus making it distinctive and original in its artistic aspects. The cast will include John Tidrington Frazer, who played The Messiah in the Passion Play mentioned; Norman Paul Hardy and Joe Johnson, who also were in that play. In the third act a large chorus will be heard, under the direction of John Blakey, with John Lucas at the pipe organ.

Guy Lombardo, who will head his Royal Canadians on the Stanley stage tomorrow, is another small-towner whose career is somewhat similar to that of Fred Waring. Fred and some of his pals began in State College, Pa., and Lombardo recruited a bunch of schoolmates in his home town, London, Ontario, Canada. His musical recipe has been "slow, sweet and simple," and his method has been to hang on until he made the customers like it. So he hung on for four years in his first long engagement in Cleveland. When he jumped to Chicago there were eight couples on the dancing floor when he played his first tune. Yet he remained there four years, too, and he has piled up a similar record in New York, his present headquarters. There are three other Lombardo boys in the Royal Canadians. Their Italian father, not musical himself, insisted that all should learn to play some instrument. Guy, being the eldest boy, was given a violin, and was told to go to it. He did.

The closing performance of the Y. Playhouse, Bellefield avenue, the premiere of an original farce by David Cornman, has been set for Monday, June 4. The title, incidentally, has been changed to "Mars Over Venus." The players will include Beulah Cohen, Gilbert Milton, Hannah Golding, Beatrice Lasday-Hirsch, Jesse T. Cimberg, Sadye Perlman, Betty Kantor, Sylvia Shapira, Herbe Hoffman and Alfred Deutsch.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

Noted Fliers Will Attend Field Day; Bob Pyper, Tail-Skid Member, to Stunt

Greetings, Junior Birdmen!

Our Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Wing Field Day to be held at the City-County Airport Saturday, June 9, is certainly going to be an event that none of you boys and girls want to miss. I have already told you about the flying pageant and the inspection of the airport field and hangars. Today I have more news for you.

Bob Pyper, 17, the only member of our Tail-Skid Unit and the youngest flier in Pennsylvania, will be on hand to show you some "trick" flying. He is a very likable fellow and is always willing to answer questions and talk about aviation. Come up and meet him!

Besides there will be almost a score of other fliers including Al Williams, Roscoe Turner, Hal Bazley, Miss Helen Richey, Lieut. Corley McDarment and Irving Newman—the flying photographer. I'll tell you about the others a little later. Be sure and watch this column.

Next week I will tell you how to reach the field and give you a detailed program of the various events. The Sun-Telegraph is trying to arrange special transportation rates for the J. B. members. I'll tell you about that also. It looks as though I'm going to have a lot of good news for you.

The Field Day program—don't forget—starts at 12 noon. We must co-operate with the airport guides as much as possible and so, in order to have an efficient system of inspection every boy and girl should arrive early. The program will run until 5 p. m.

Bring Your Cameras

Many members have written in asking if they could bring their camera along. Sure thing! But you are going to have a difficult time if you expect to obtain pictures of the flying events in the afternoon. With speeding, stunting, maneuvring planes all above you it will be difficult to focus your lense on any one craft.

There will be plenty of snap shots, however, for you to take during the inspection hour when we inspect the field, travel down the runways, take a peek into the hangars and have the various planes described to us; and then view, in parade, the many fliers who will perform for us in the afternoon.

Many members have written to me asking if they may ask their mothers and fathers to the Field Day to see the great air circus. Those of you who have friends or parents who would like to view the flying activities may invite them to attend.

Perhaps you have a neighbor boy or girl friend who is interested in our organization. Bring them along, I'm sure they will want to become a member once they meet the hundreds of boys and girls in the Pittsburgh district who have already joined.

I am arranging to have many prominent fliers attend our Field Day Activity to talk to you. Fliers whom you are all anxious to see, pilots whom you are all anxious to hear from, and in a day or so, in this column, I will give you a list of the prominent aces who will honor us with their presence on this gala day. You just can't afford to stay away!

Motto Winners Go On Trip

The four winners of the motto contest and I will leave for Washington tomorrow. I will write at least one of our daily columns from the capital telling you about the people we meet and the interesting places we visit.

From now on you will find in the index of features on page one of the Sun-Telegraph the page on which you will find the J. B. column. This is so that you members may turn directly to the J. B. column. You will find the index at the bottom of page one. It is headed, "In Today's Sun-Telegraph."

Another lesson in the Model Builders' Course will be published tomorrow. Don't miss it!

HAPPY LANDINGS!

Statesman's Son Lauds Junior Birdmen Idea

FERNANDO L. CONTRERAS

Pittsburgh boys and girls are fortunate in being able to join an organization such as the Junior Birdmen of America, Fernando Lopez Contreras, 21-year-old son of the Venezuelan minister of war, said here today.

Contreras, who is learing to fly at the Penn School of Aviation, and has just received his amateur pilot's license, said:

"The boys and girls in my country are just starting to become airminded. They would like to learn how to build model planes and study aviation, but there is nobody to teach them.

"The youth of Pittsburgh are very fortunate in being able to join the Junior Birdmen. I have read the daily birdmen column in the Sun-Telegraph and it is very interesting."

According to Contreras there is no civilian flying in his homeland with the exception of the commercial routes of the Pan-American Airways. The entire Venezuelan army air force, he said, has no more than 60 planes.

Murrysville Man Held as Robber

J. Curlin, of 223 Braddock, who said he witnessed the robbery, chased Barton into East Pittsburgh, where he caused the arrest, police said.

Judge W. Heber Dithrich today ordered George Davis, Negro, held on a District Attorney's retainer for selling numbers in Squirral Hill.

Richard Davis said he and George had been arrested together by Constable Leonard Miller, but that Alderman Sol Goldstein had released George while holding Richard for court.

$29,000 ADDED IN PITT DRIVE

Meeting in the William Penn Hotel, workers in Pitt's Cathedral of Learning campaign to raise $1,650,000 for completion of the deifice today reported contributions totaling $29,100, bringing the grand total to date to $470,859.

Since the start of the drive, 4,000 Pittsburghers have visited the 42-story building, it was announced today. The campaign is to be completed by the end of this month. Next reports will be made Monday at a luncheon-meeting in Kaufmann's.

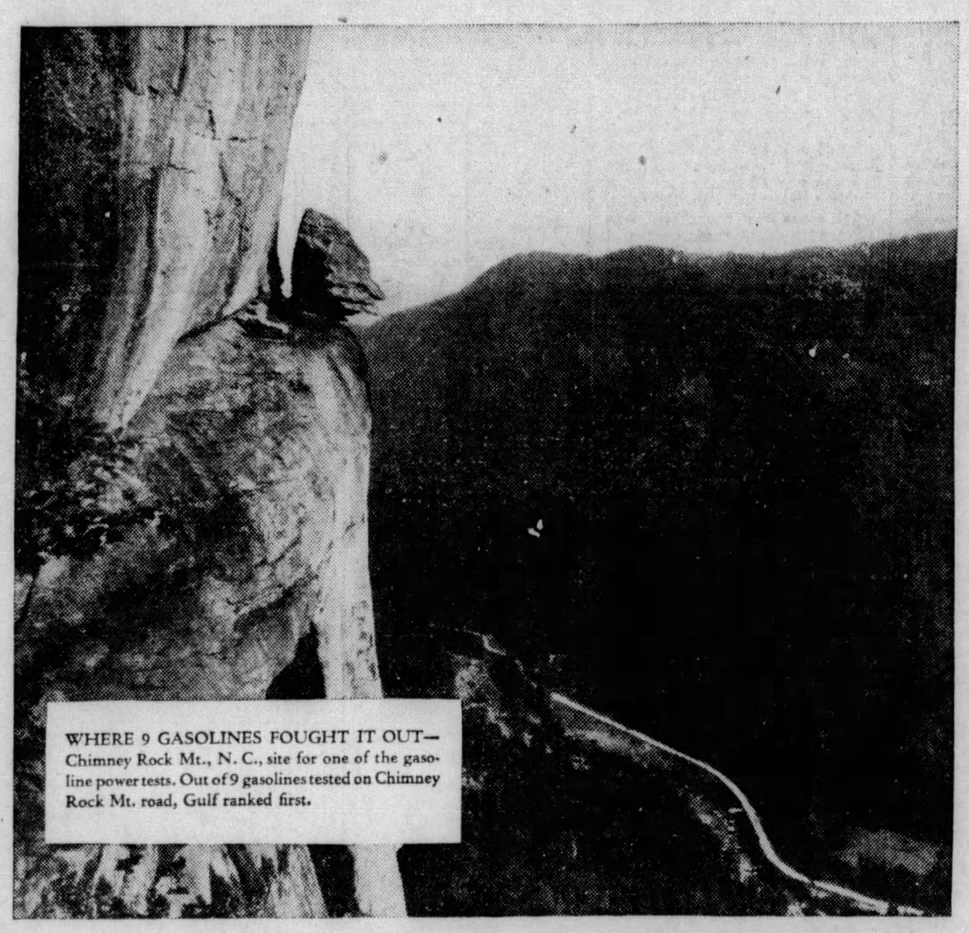
THE INSIDE STORY OF 33 GASOLINES



WHERE 9 GASOLINES FOUGHT IT OUT—Chimney Rock Mt., N. C., site for one of the gasoline power tests. Out of 9 gasolines tested on Chimney Rock Mt. road, Gulf ranked first.

What gasoline has greatest power? Is one gasoline better than another? Here is presented straight-from-the-shoulder information on the ranking of 33 different gasolines, as established by power tests on 12 famous American hills.

ARE leading gasolines as alike as peas in a pod? The answer is "No." Emphatically "No!"

For tests made on 12 famous mountain grades prove that there is a difference—a big difference—in the power of even the best gasolines!

Here's how the tests were made...To a borrowed car was hitched a heavy load. Into a special tank on the car was placed one of the gasolines to be tested. The car was then driven up hill in high gear until the motor stalled. Then this procedure was repeated for each of the gasolines tested.

Gasolines sold in the vicinity were tested and results of the test were sworn to before a Notary Public.

Naturally, the most powerful gas hauled the load farthest up hill. Read the results—and decide which gas you want for your money!

(BELOW)—READY FOR BATTLE—Samples of different gasolines, bought from local service stations ready for testing. The spikes were used to mark the point on the hill where each gasoline stalled the motor.

HOW 33 GASOLINES RANKED (IN ALL TESTS TO DATE)

All gasolines tested, except a few "third grade" brands, sold for approximately the same price as That Good Gulf. Each brand is denoted by a letter.

RETURN OF TRAYNOR BUOYS HOPES OF BUCCO TEAM

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Pie Brightens Outlook.
Boston Jinx Continues.
Pitt Mourns Hastings.
Hauser Remedies Defect.
Forgotten Cup Yachts.
Famous Race Car Back.

The fact that in the test of a full game Pie Traynor's throwing arm showed evidence of a complete recovery, gave a silver lining to the Pirate defeat in the opening tilt of the Boston series. Pie's absence from the lineup meant a heavy loss in hitting power and speed, and while the strength of the club otherwise was attested by its success in winning 16 out of 24 contests, it was not to be expected that such a gait could be kept up indefinitely. Without Traynor, the Bucs were not up to normal in either playing strength or morale, and his return, even though if it should fail to bring immediate results, means much for the future.

Pie Traynor

The loss of the Hub opener indicated the continued activity of the most persistent jinx in the circuit. That was the seventh straight defeat suffered in Boston by the Rovers, and the fifteenth game dropped by them out of the last 21 played there. Fred Frankhouse, in particular, is strangely effective against the Gibsons. They have lost eight games out of 11 to that right-hander, and have not won a decision over him since August 30, 1932.

DEATH TAKES ONE OF PITT'S GREATEST

Not all of the heroes of collegiate sports who combine sterling character and classroom leadership with surpassing athletic ability are the Merriwells of fiction. There have been some in real life. One of them died here yesterday. His name was Charles Elliott (Andy) Hastings. An amazing halfback in football, a star in basketball and baseball, a scholastic standout who deferred the completion of his brilliant college career until he had served his country in the World War, as modest and unassuming in his glory as the most obscure freshman, and with a personality that endeared him to every acquaintance, Andy Hastings was one of the greatest figures in the history of the University of Pittsburgh and ranked high among the college athletes of America. His death is widely mourned.

Though his personal liking in sports was strongest for baseball, Andy, strangely enough, was greatest in football and basketball. His individual brilliance as a halfback had much to do with making Pop Warner's famous Pitt eleven in 1916 one of the greatest of all-time. There was a team that was almost all-America as a whole—Pat Herron and Cliff Carlson, present basketball coach, at the ends; Claude Thornhill and Pud Seidel at the tackles; Jock Sutherland and Dale Sies at the guards; Bob Peck at center; Jimmy Morrow at quarterback; Hastings and Jimmy DeHart at the halves, and George McLaren at fullback. It just nosed out Navy, 20 to 19, but once it got going it crushed Syracuse 30 to 0, Penn 20 to 0, W. & J. 37 to 0, and Penn State 31 to 0, also defeating Carnegie Tech 14 to 6, Westminster 57 to 0, and Allegheny College 46 to 0, a total of 255 points against only 25 for opponents. Peck was Walter Camp's all-America choice at center that season for the second time, and Herron was named at end on the Camp's second team. Peck has passed on, and so has Chalky Williamson, one of Hastings' mates on the team of 1915. Now the last whistle has blown for Hastings and Andy goes to join them, and football has seen no greater player or finer character summoned by the Great Referee.

HAUSER SAID TO HAVE CURED WEAKNESS

When Joe Hauser was in the big show with the A's and the Indians, he could not hit a ball pitched to him high and inside. Because of that weakness, together with his bad knee, major league clubs have declined to consider giving Hauser a new trial, despite the fact that since 1930 Joe has been the most sensational slugger in the minor leagues, his total of 69 home runs for Minneapolis in the American Association last year being the highest ever made in any circuit.

Joe Hauser

According to Association men, Hauser has overcome that flaw, and the pitchers declare that if Joe has a weakness of any kind at present they are unable to find it. Roger Peckinpaugh, managing Kansas City, asserts that Hauser is a better hitter now than he was when in the big show, and in this he is supported by Cy Slapnickna, scout for the Indians, who also reports Joe as being much more impressive at the plate for Donie Bush's club than he ever was before.

OLD DEFENDERS LIE FORGOTTEN IN YARD

With the nation's attention centered on the gleaming new yacht Rainbow, recently launched as the hope of Harold Vanderbilt and the New York Yacht Club to retain the America's Cup for the fifteenth straight time, Joe King looked farther around the Herreshoff yard at Bristol and read a sentimental story in the obscure presence of two other cup defenders of earlier days. Resolute and Enterprise are lying there deserted and forgotten now, yet in 1920 Resolute kept the famous trophy here by defeating Shamrock IV, and in 1930 Enterprise turned back Shamrock V.

They look little like America's Cup defenders at present. Resolute is weather-beaten and shows rust scars on her once flawless hull. Enterprise is a stripped yacht, much of her gear having been transferred to Rainbow. Resolute and Enterprise each cost about a million dollars to build. Now they are worth only scrap money.

LOCKHART'S CAR IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE

Frank Lockhart is dead, but his car will go on. Six years have passed since the great young automobile racing driver, at the age of 26, cracked up and went to his doom in an attempt to smash the world speed record on the sands of Daytona Beach, but in memory Lockhart will be racing again at Indianapolis next Wednesday, and if he is looking on from the racing drivers' Valhalla he will see the machine that was called his own brain child trying for the honors in the famous classic which he won himself back in 1926.

Frank Lockhart

For Milt Marion, who now owns Lockhart's famous car, a Miller Special Eight, has been putting it in shape for the Indianapolis race, and, if nothing goes wrong, the 223-pound pilot will drive it in the 500-mile grind. Marion has had a lot of trouble with the machine since it made 189 miles an hour in one trial last year—not smash-ups, but little mechanical ills. However, he assured Harold Parrott that it's working smoothly now, and, moreover, predicts that it's going to win.

Softball, the sport which the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph is fostering through a sanctioned amateur tournament, has caught on even with the college girls. Above are a group of Pennsylvania College for Women girls playing a game between two teams named the Pirates and Giants on their athletic field. The sport is just as popular with girl athletes as it is with the boys, as reflected in the entries being received by the Sun-Telegraph for its tournament, which gets under way in Western Pennsylvania June 10. AMERICAN NET STARS BEATEN IN FRANCE

PARIS, May 24.—(AP.)—France today defeated the United States in a team tennis series between leading women players of the two countries, Ida Adamoff scoring the deciding fourth victory in the seven-match series when she defeated Josephine Cruickshank, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Previously Alice Marble had defaulted to Mme. June Henrotin after fainting on the court in the intense heat and Carolin Babcock and Sarah Palfrey had lost to Jacqueline Goldschmidt and Colette Rosambert, respectively.

Helen Jacobs, United States champion and captain of the team, which will play England next month in defense of the Wightman Cup, scored the only American victory in the first five matches. She defeated Mme. Rene Mathieu, ranking woman player of France, and her nemesis, 6-2, 6-3.

Miss Marble was trailing 4-1 in games when she fainted just after serving a double fault and had to be carried from the court. She revived quickly in the dressing room, but the physician who attended her declined to let her return to play.

Mlle. Goldschmidt defeated Miss Babcock, 6-3, 6-4, and Miss Palfrey went down, 3-6, 1-6.

Wilmer Hines, former University of North Carolina star, entered the third round of men's singles in the French hard court championships, defeating R. Galeppe, Monaco Davis Cup player, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2.

Fred Perry, British Davis Cup ace, defeated Jean Augustin, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1, in a second round encounter.

The French team annexed an unneeded point in the doubles when Mme. Mathieu and Mme. Henrotin defeated Miss Jacobs and Miss Palfrey, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5. The Americans pulled up in the deciding set to square the score in games at five-all, but the French pair ran through the next two games to take the set and match.

FRED WEPPNER WINS GOLF TOURNEY

Outstanding amateur golfers of the district monopolized the spotlight yesterday in the initial one-day tournament of the season under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Golf Association. The event was staged at South Hills, and Fred Weppner, veteran Pittsburgh Field Club ace, won top honors with a score of 71, one shot better than the total turned in by Jack Benson, young home club luminary.

Weppner was out in 37 and home in 34, his second nine score beating par by a single stroke. Benson played consistent golf, bagging a 36 both going out and coming in. His putting was a bit off, and this lack used up strokes he might well have saved.

Dr. Joseph Stanger, of Highland, finished with a 74 and Knox Young, Jr., the West Penn amateur champion, and Dr. Tom Canon, former Pitt star, each took 75's. Larry Seaman, of Uniontown, and Dr. Pumphrey, of South Hills, turned in 76's.

The low net prize was won by Dr. G. W. McConnell, of Highland, with a 94-28—66. In the match play against par event, played under seven-eighths handicap, J. Dorning, of St. Clair, and H. Schoenfelt, of Castle Shannon, led, finishing 9 up. A total of 175 golfers competed in the event.

Tomorrow, the Western Pennsylvania Women's Golf Association will resume its team match play, with Section I playing at Westmoreland and Section II at Highland.

Len Rupert scored a hole-in-one at the Churchill Valley Country Club yesterday when he sank his tee shot on the 138-yard No. 13 hole.

Kauffmann Reveals Inside Story of Golf Career

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

There is material for Bob Ripley in the career of Carl F. Kauffmann, star public links golfer, who never took a golf lesson in his life, yet was the winner of the National Public Links title three times in a row and the runner-up the year before he won his first laurels.

In addition, Kauffmann, who will try to qualify to play for his fourth title in this year's tournament, to be held at South Park, July 30-August 4, has won the Western Pennsylvania Amateur title once, in 1925, and was the runnerup another year, 1922. His run of National Public Links titles ran through 1927, 1928 and 1929. He was the runnerup in 1926.

STARTED AS CADDIE

Kauffmann, noted for his taciturnity, revealed the hidden chapters of his golfing career during a radio interview with the writer in the course of a Trained Seals program over WCAE last night.

He said he got into golf as a caddie because as a youngster he had to earn his own pocket money. He played in his first tournament in 1920 and five years later was a National champion. Three years after getting into the game he was the Schenley Park champion.

His favorite player always has been Chick Evans, but he has not patterned his game after that of any player, saying that the more he studies and attempts to imitate the play of others the worse he finds his game. He practices in the evenings and plays around on Saturdays and Sundays.

PRACTICE LEADS TO SUCCESS

His favorite sport is baseball, and he has played it, tennis, basketball and football. His biggest thrill did not come on a golf course, but when he arrived home from winning his third national title in as many years and saw his mother sitting in a large automobile amidst a welcoming committee, a smile of joy upon her features. His toughest matches have been played on the Schenley Park public course, where he got his start, and there have been many of them.

His hardest shot is the execution of long iron to the green.

BOOSTS AL M'BRIDE

He thinks the average public links player is as well versed in the game and as capable as the average private club player, and thinks South Park is the finest course on which the national public links tournament has been played and will furnish a stiff test for the players. He considers Al McBride, former Schenley Park professional, now at South Park, one of his earliest boosters, one of the finest teachers among the professionals.

That's a lot for Carl Kauffmann, the Sphinx, to say in one sitting, but he said it all last night, and the substance of his remarks is reprinted here for the benefit and information of those golf fans who didn't have an opportunity to listen in on the broadcast.

ANDY HASTINGS' DEATH

Andy Hastings' death comes as a shock to many sports fans who followed his fine career as an all-round athlete and particularly as a football player at the University of Pittsburgh more than a decade ago. Hastings was one of the best backfield men the Panthers ever had. Dr. Bill McClelland, State Athletic Commissioner, who played football and baseball with Andy, said today he regarded the latter as the most versatile man behind the line in that sterling squad, and many who saw Hastings play will concur in that estimate. In addition, Andy was well liked personally. He was the sort who preferred to remain in the background off the field, and took the bumps of life with a smile.

DUNDEE MATCH IN DOUBT

After weeks of negotiating, Max Waxman, manager of Vince Dundee, the world middleweight champion, has turned down, at least for the present, a title match with Ted Yarosz at Forbes Field this summer and has advised Matchmaker Lew Raymond to this effect. Raymond had gone to the trouble of making terms for the use of Forbes Field and had offered a guarantee of $12,500 with a privilege of 37½ per cent to Dundee to risk his title against Yarosz, and finally had Waxman cornered. When he pressed for an answer, Max admitted he didn't want the bout because he has other offers which, while perhaps not as lucrative, offer less danger in the way of losing the title.

Ray Foutts, manager of Yarosz, is planning to go to New York to post a forfeit with the New York Commission and the N. B. A., both of which have recognized Teddy as the logical contender, and ask that Dundee's title be declared forfeited if he refuses to box Yarosz within a reasonable time.

U. S., CANADA IN CUP PLAY

WILMINGTON, Del., May 24.—(AP.)—Ace racquet wielders of the United States and Canada squared off for the opening of the American zone Davis Cup tennis eliminations today.

They meet in four singles and one doubles engagements over today, tomorrow and Saturday at the Wilmington Country Club, with the winner of three of the five matches gaining the right to oppose Mexico to decide this continent's representative overseas in the classic international play.

The luck of the draw places the ranking player of each country—Frank Shields, New York ace, and Walter Martin, Toronto flash—as opponents in the second of today's two singles engagements. In the opening encounter the California giant, Lester Stoefen, meets Marcel Rainville, diminutive Montreal veteran.

With official pronouncement of tomorrow's doubles pairings not to be given out until 24 hours before the teams go on the court, the likelihood is George Lott and Johnny Van Ryn will uphold the United States' end against the strokes of Gilbert Nunns, Canadian captain, and his speedy teammate, Laird Watts.

Saturday, the singles opponents of today are reversed, and Shields will take the court against Rainville, while Martin swings his raquet against Stoefen.

POLISH CHAMPS LOSE

CHICAGO, May 24.—(INS.)—By the top-heavy score of seven bouts to one, the Golden Gloves champions of the Central States last night defeated the amateur boxing champions of Poland at the stadium here. The invaders won only the flyweight bout.

BOSTON, May 24.—The first-place Pirates today were not exactly laughing off their decisive defeat of yesterday, but George Gibson and his Pittsburgh warriors were not worried to any noticeable extent as a result of the reception they received as they made their seasonal bow here.

The Buccos had cause for thankfulness even in defeat. In the first place they saw Capt. Pie Traynor back at his third base post after an enforced idleness of more than a month. Traynor left the Pittsburgh lineup with a sore arm in the first week of the championship season.

PIE ON JOB

Tommy Thevenow went into the breach and turned in a most creditable performance, but when Traynor informed Manager Gibson he was ready to go back to his post, the Canuck pilot had no hesitancy in making a switch in a winning combination. The fact that the Pirates were leading the league did not deter Gibson who figured there was a bigger percentage in having the faster and harder-hitting Traynor in the lineup.

Gibson and Traynor were both pleased with the latter's showing as he went back into action. The pilot of the Bucs stated last night that Pie is back to stay. The Buccos, therefore, see bright times ahead.

So far as the Boston victory of yesterday is concerned there is just one graceful thing for the Pirates to do and that is to concede that Fred Frankhouse richly deserved his triumph. Any hurler who can hold the Bucco attack to five hits while pitching with perfect control is getting close to the shutout standard and Frankhouse had a runless triumph until the ninth inning. The final score was 6 to 1.

M'MANUS HITS HOMER

Heinie Meine matched his skill against Frankhouse in a standoff manner through five innings, during which time neither club was able to get a runner around the sacks. The slab duel was influenced towards the Boston dugout in the sixth when Marty McManus poled out a homer with one of his mates aboard. This blow sank the Pirates for the afternoon.

Bill Urbanski reached Meine for a homer in the seventh and Heinie stepped aside for Pinch-hitter Jensen in the eighth. Waite Hoyt reached the slab scene in the last half of the eighth and was nicked for three hits on top of Lavagetto's fumble. The Braves put the game on the ice right there as they tallied three times.

Frankhouse was never in trouble. P. Waner nicked him for Paul's second double in the ninth and after riding along to third on Lindstrom's out, the rightfielder scored on Vaughan's fly.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: CHAIR A LA PISA—On April 29, 1930, George Ingling came into the office of William Headrick, 502 Fidelity Trust Building, Indianapolis, for a conference and, as he sat down, he pulled a chair forward, tilted it and rested his elbow. When he stood up a few minutes later the chair remained balanced! Headrick left it just as it was, and it was not until 42 hours later, on May 1, that it toppled over. FIVE-YEAR-OLD DEEP SEA FISHERMAN—Clarence Fine, Jr., son of charter boat guide in the city yacht basin, Miami, Fla., recently had the supreme thrill of a fisherman when he landed a fish that actually outweighed him by one-half pound. STAR HALFBACK RATED AMONG GREATEST

By JESS CARVER

Williamson first, then Peck and now Andy Hastings—so death has removed three of the members of Pitt's famous football teams, including the 1916 eleven, hailed as one of the greatest of all time.

Andy Hastings

The death of Charles Elliott (Andy) Hastings yesterday came as a shock to many, but to the more intimate of Andy's acquaintances, the demise of the former brilliant halfback came as no surprise. Unknown even to himself, Andy had been in a serious condition for some time. He'll be buried Saturday afternoon from his late residence at 1410 North Highland avenue, and among those who will carry the body of the former Panther great to its final resting place will be many who have known all along that they'd soon be called upon to lend willing, and yet unwilling, strength toward bearing Andy Hastings to rest.

Hastings ranked with the outstanding figures in Pitt's football history. He was one of the university's greatest halfbacks. The regular left halfback of the undefeated 1916 team, Andy starred in all departments of the game. Withal he was a quiet, unassuming and entirely lovable character, too much so, in fact, for his own good, for when it came to a question of electing he or Dr. H. C. Carlson captain of the team, Coach Pop Warner remarked:

Not only did Andy star on the gridiron; he was a brilliant baseball player. No lesser a character than Jimmy Callahan, one-time manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, remarking of Andy:

"He's one of the greatest fielding second basemen I've ever seen."

He won varsity basketball letters the same three years.

Andy was born in Brookville, Pa., on January 24, 1893. He prepped at Kiski and entered Pitt in 1914, and played on the varsity eleven in '14, '15 and '16. He was a regular on the baseball teams of 1915, 1916 and 1917.

When the United States entered the World War, Hastings enlisted with the Pitt base hospital unit and sailed for France early in 1917.

He remained abroad until after the war, and when he returned to complete his education in 1919, Coach Warner shifted him from halfback to fullback.

Graduating from the School of Economics, he obtained employment with the Blawknox Steel Company, and up until the time of his death was employed as head of the company's real estate department.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rhoda McClue Hastings, and a daughter, Jane, aged 12.

The former gridiron hero was active in church and Y. M. C. A. work and was a leader of youths' activities in the East Liberty district. He was beloved by his former team, classmates and business associates.

Fort Pitt Brewing Head Explains Beer Shortage

An ever-increasing demand for Fort Pitt beer has reached the point where, temporarily, the supply is inadequate, states Samuel J. Grenet, president of the Fort Pitt Brewing Company of Sharpsburg.

"We are doing our very best at the brewery here to meet the demand," said Mr. Grenet yesterday. "Our plant is operating 24 hours a day, and just as fast as our Fort Pitt Pilsener and our Pitt Special reaches the proper age, it is being bottled and barreled and rushed to our customers.

"In behalf of our distributors throughout Western Pennsylvania, I would like to explain to their customers that it is simply impossible for the distributors to get increased supplies.

"Of course, as the public demand for Fort Pitt beer has kept increasing, the retailers and wholesalers supplying the public have been asking us to increase the amount of their orders. We must frankly explain that we cannot, immediately, meet this increased demand. We are now supplying our distributors with our full capacity. We cannot sacrifice quality standards or correct aging to meet the increased orders, for the popularity of our Fort Pitt Pilsener is based, not only on use of fine ingredients, but on proper aging."

SCHOOL NET TEAMS MEET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Preparatory and high school net stars battle on the Trees Field courts this afternoon in first round intersectional playoff contests of the Interscholastic Tennis Conference title chase. Four group winners will tangle in elimination hostilities, the 1933 champion Mount Lebanon squad, Suburban Section II victor, engaging Allderdice, city premier, while Shady Side Academy, survivor in Suburban Section I, takes on Wilkinsburg, lifter of honors of Suburban Section III.

Mount Lebanon, seeking its third leg on the University of Pittsburgh Trophy, enters the decisive combats minus Ralph Bald, crack number one man and holder of the Western Pennsylvania junior crown. Bald has been laid up with a severe cold and, according to word last evening, is definitely out of tennis for at least a fortnight.

Allderdice yesterday defeated Carrick, 5 to 0, to clinch the city title.

Local varsity racqueters are idle today, but will perform aplenty prior to the end of the week. Tomorrow the Dukes entertain West Virginia on the Bluff and on Saturday they will trek to Beaver Falls to encounter Geneva. Pitt has a home date with Grove City on Saturday, the clash being the last of the year for the Panthers.

The Pitt luminaries edged out another 5-4 decision over W. & J. yesterday, the Presidents battling to the last before succumbing as Capt. Nat Ganger and Joe Madden, of Pitt, eked out a 6-2, 6-8, 7-5 verdict over Capt. Hopper and Davis, of the Prexies, in the concluding doubles, ther college frays saw Duquesne drop a 6-1 affair at Waynesburg and beheld Allegheny down Westminster, 4-3.

GOODMAN, GUILFORD DEFEATED IN BRITISH AMATEUR

DUNLAP, LITTLE CONTINUE ADVANCE

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 24.—(AP.)—Johnny Goodman, American Open champion and betting-odds favorite, was defeated in the fifth round of the British Amateur golf championship today by Leslie Garnett, an Englishman, by 3 and 1.

The surprising defeat of the young Omaha star stripped the championship of the first two favorites, Jack McLean, crack Scottish Walker Cup player, was defeated this afternoon by James Wallace, an unemployed carpenter, by 1 up.

Wallace, who because of his financial circumstances has the free services of his caddy, defeated three other Walker Cup players in his march to the quarter-final round. In the first round he eliminated H. Chandler Egan, veteran member of the American forces, and in the second round he overhauled Cyril Tolley, rotund British cupster. This morning he encountered Eric Fiddian, another member of John Bull's international team.

DUNLAP, LITTLE WIN

The only Americans left in the championship were George T. Dunlap, Jr., United States Amateur champion, and W. Lawson Little, San Francisco husky, who are among the eight survivors for the quarter-finals to be played tomorrow morning. They are in opposite halves of the draw.

Dunlap won two matches today, defeating Roger Wethered, 1 up, in the third round, and R. S. Walker, Aberdeen University student, by 4 and 3 this afternoon. Little's victims were Lionel Munn, 47-year-old Irishman, who lost by 3 and 2, and Gordon Peters, of Glasgow, who yielded, 4 and 3.

McLean eliminated Jesse Guilford, of Boston, former American champion, 4 and 3, in the fourth round.

The Prince of Wales was in the gallery estimated at 6,000 that followed Dunlap as the American Amateur champion carved out his afternoon victory. The Prince, wearing the loudest check topcoat ever seen in these parts, chatted with Dunlap as they swung down the third fairway.

NARROW ESCAPE

Goodman too long tempted destiny with his sudden loss of control today. This morning, in the fourth round, he was down at dormie 2 to an obscure Troon man, H. C. McCallum, and was able to win only through a stymie on the eighteenth and a five-foot putt on the first extra hole.

But this afternoon such tactics were not to be. Goodman couldn't hit a tee shot to save his life. Usually the most normal and deft of players, he found a trap at least once on every hole and, in spite of some three-putt spasms, was still able to lead Garnett, 1 up, at the ninth.

But Garnett squared it at the eleventh with a nice putt, after Johnny had climbed out of a trap and, from that point, the Englishman was never down again, finally ending it on the seventeenth.

Two down at the seventeenth, Goodman played a spectacular second shot to within 15 feet of the cup. Garnett's second was more than twice that far away. The Briton carefully sighted the curved course his ball would have to travel to the cup and then steadily and firmly stroked the ball. As if in a groove, the ball rolled true and plopped into the can for another birdie and the match.

GREEN TO BOX JOHNNY PILC

Anson Green will box Johnny Pilc, a tough-punching taxicab driver-boxer, of New York, in the 10-round main bout of the second show of the outdoor season at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night, Promoter Bus Vogel announced today.

Pilc has been chosen in preference to Solly Dukelsky, of Chicago, who boxed a draw with Billy Holt in the same ring last Monday. Originally, Al Diamond, of Paterson, N. J., who recently boxed Champion Vince Dundee 15 rounds, was to be Green's opponent, but he has a match on elsewhere.

Pilc has been boxing a number of years, but only recently has been attracting attention, fighting all of the tough middleweights in the east.

Four five-round bouts will make up the preliminary card. Johnny Birek is paired with Ralph Gizzy in one of them and Carl Montebano with Casey Rhodes in another. Opponents are being sought for Al Quaill and Johnny Durso in the others.

Between Rounds

Johnny Daniels, of Charleroi, is one of the most promising amateur heavyweight boxers developed in this section in some time. He stands 6 feet 1½ inches and weighs around 200 pounds. He is a protege of Tug Phillips.

The 15-round bout between Danny Hassett and Billy Ketchel for the state light-heavyweight title in Philadelphia tomorrow night will be their rubber meeting. Ketchel holds a two-round knockout over Hassett, while Hassett is the winner of a 10-round decision over Ketchel.

Ted Yarosz' next appearance here will be as the headliner of the benefit show to be held at Hickey Park, Millvale, one week from next Monday night for the family of the late Mike Ray. Matchmaker Lew Raymond's committee is building up an attractive program around Teddy.

An open-air amateur boxing show under the auspices of the West Park Independent Fire Company will be held on the Stowe Township High School field next Monday night. Eight bouts will be staged.

Chuck Mullins boxes Henry Palmer, of Cleveland, in a main bout at Akron Saturday night of next week. Johnny Birek meets Johnny Doebler in the semi-final and Harry Krause is in a preliminary against Young Lysle.

Steve Nickleach, Ford City amateur welterweight, will turn professional soon. He is 19 years old, and has won 44 bouts, eight of them by knockouts, in 51 starts in two years.

COKERS THIRD IN MEET

Owing to a mixup in scoring, due to the fact that Carmichaels and Connellsville each had an athlete named Stoll in the meet, Connellsville has been declared winners of third place in the annual W. P. I. A. L. championships, staged Saturday at Pitt. Stoll, of Carmichaels, it was revealed, was credited with second place in the broad jump, actually won by Stoll, of Connellsville.

TEXAS BARS ROSS

AUSTIN, Tex., May 24.—(AP.)—Charles H. Poe, Texas boxing and wrestling commissioner, indefinitely has suspended Barney Ross, lightweight champion, for his failure to keep a contract for a match with Tony Herrera at Fort Worth April 21. Poe requested the National Boxing Association to take similar action.

DEMAND HEAVY FOR SOFTBALL RULE BOOKS

By PHILIP GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary

An indication of the rapid growth of interest in softball, which is sponsored in the Pittsburgh district by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur championship tournament this summer, may be gained from the fact that virtually all of the sporting goods manufacturers who have issued rule books now are in their third editions of the guides.

Managers and players who wish to obtain copies may do so from their sporting goods dealers or from the sports department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph upon application.

COMBINES ALL FORMS

The primary reason for the sponsorship of softball is to standardize the playground variety of baseball, which has come along rapidly during the past few years, with mushball, playground ball, a variety of indoor baseball and other hybrid specimens being adapted. Softball is a combination of all of these and best covers the situation.

Entries in the Sun-Telegraph's tournament close June 1. Groups of teams are sending in their entry blanks daily, and if you haven't sent in your blank yet, do so now. Be all set to go when the starting gun explodes on June 10.

PLAYERS AGE LIMITS

Senior teams consist of players of any age, intermediate teams are players who are not more than 21 years old and junior teams players not more than 18 years old.

The Majestics, of the East End, Raymond Shook, manager; Kerr's Collegians, of Indiana, Kenneth W. Kerr, manager, and the Ardara Lions, of Ardara, M. Hopkins, manager, are among the latest teams to enter.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS GAIN IN A. L. CHASE

RED SOX HALT INDIANS AS YANKS BOW

The St. Louis Browns haven't yet become the sensations of the American League, but since they settled down at home to face the Eastern clubs they have turned in some successful performances.

The Browns have taken two out of three from the Red Sox, duplicated that performance against the Athletics, and opened a third series yesterday with a smashing 6-to-2 triumph over Washington.

Buck Newsom, the big rookie from Los Angeles, hurled a neat game although he gave up 10 hits, as many as the Browns got. Another recruit, Ray Pepper, supplied the scoring punch by knocking in four runs. The triumph climaxed the Browns' two-day climb from seventh place into a three-way tie with the Senators and Detroit for third as St. Louis reached the .500 mark for the first time.

TIGERS LOSE

The Tigers lost their exclusive hold on that berth when three of their pitchers failed to halt Philadelphia's 15-hit attack and the Athletics won an 11-to-5 decision.

The league leading Yankees ran into a 14-to-2 shellacking at the hands of the Chicago White Sox. Ted Lyons pitched six-hit ball to give the Yanks their sixth defeat in seven games in the West while the Pale Hose piled up 13 blows, including homers by Jimmy Dykes, Lyons and Al Simmons. The defeat was less costly than the others, however, as the Red Sox halted Cleveland, 7-5, with a three-run assault in the ninth.

Pittsburgh and Chicago, the National League's leading pair, suffered setbacks. Fred Frankhouse limited the Pirates to five safeties, while Boston battered Heinie Meine and Waite Hoyt in the late innings for a 6-to-1 triumph. The fourth-place Giants took care of the Cubs, 5 to 2, giving Guy Bush his first defeat after seven pitching victories.

DODGERS WIN

The Brooklyn Dodgers came to the aid of their New York enemies by slapping a 5-to-3 defeat onto the third-place Cardinals, reducing the St. Louis margin to a half game.

Harvey Hendrick's timely hitting enabled the Phillies to defeat the last-place Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 2, in a mound duel between Phil Collins and Benny Frey.

To the Sports Editor:

I notice that an English writer says there will be another war in a few years. If people go around saying that kind of stuff, why, maybe they can talk the world into it. It's just like a fellow telling everybody that his neighbors, Jones and Smith, are going to bust each other's noses next week, and, unless Jones and Smith are pretty level-headed chaps, they soon will be goaded into it. If nations must fight, let's organize an international league with England, France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Japan, Russia and Austria in it and let them fight it out for the pennant, and then the winner can play the Pittsburgh Pirates for the world championship and I'll take a bet on the Pirates. Regards,

HONUS WAGNER.

M.-A. LEADERS WIN AGAIN

The Red Birds finally beat back a threatening assault by Charleston in a three-hour clash which the leaders took, 11 to 10. Each team scored thrice in the ninth.

The Dayton Ducks, floundering to the tune of 10 errors, were lambasted 13 to 8 by the Wheeling Stogies, who were outhit 9 to 10 by the Ohioans.

In yesterday's Pennsylvania State Association games, Greensburg took Washington's measure, 7 to 1; Jeannette downed Charleroi, 8 to 3, and Monessen beat McKeesport, 9 to 3, although Manager Leo Mackey has protested the victory, claiming that a ball hit by Dugan, of Monessen, which bounded over the fence should have been called a double instead of a triple.

MOTORBOATING GAINS BIG IMPETUS

Not in years has there been so much interest in motorboat racing and motor boating for pleasure as there is this year. This fact is attested by the vast number of new and reconditioned craft being placed in the water throughout the United States, as reported by the manufacturers and boat clubs.

The Oakmont Boat Club is the fastest-growing organization in the Pittsburgh district and the enthusiasm of its members has been fanned to a high degree by its sponsorship of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Hearst Gold Cup regatta, to be held on a mile-and-a-quarter course in front of its clubhouse on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, July 14-15. Many new members have been added and more applications for membership are being received daily. Members are buying new boats and planning to do their bit toward making the regatta a gala event.

TRY OUT COURSE

Every week-end between now and the time of the regatta will find racers and owners trying out the course as they adjust their racing creations for the tests, which will be for both amateur and professional racers.

Many of the drivers who will compete here will go on to Maryland for the fifth annual Havre De Grace Yacht Club regatta at the mouth of the Susquehanna the following Friday and Saturday and will compete at Buffalo the week before they come here.

STARTING TIMES SET

In order to enable the half-day workers to reach the scene, the local regatta will not get under way until 2 p. m., on Saturday, while the Sunday races are scheduled an hour earlier. The Pirates will not be at home at the time, so that there will be no conflict of major attractions for the sports-lovers of the district.

BOOKS OPPOSE HOMEWOOD IN CITY LEAGUE

By TOM BIRKS

Two games are scheduled for the City League this evening, Bill Dalzell taking his Homewood club to Olympia Park to meet the Book nine, and Mt. Oliver invades Beltzhoover.

Mt. Oliver's aspirations as the logical opponent for Books in the first half race received a severe jolt last night at the Frederick street grounds. A crowd estimated at 5,000 loyal fans watched the defending champions lambast two of Manager Sully Ross's pitchers for 11 runs, while the locals managed to eke out a lonely tally.

Mt. Oliver was unfortunate in the fact that Playing Manager Heine Boll gave Bimmy Steele the nod to work the game. The likeable redhead turned in another fine game. He mowed down the enemy in the early part of the game until his mates had given him a commanding lead.

The short right field at Mt. Oliver is made to order for the hard hitting Olympia Park sluggers, and Scheutz, who started the game for Mt. Oliver, left early. Kapfer replaced him and looked fair, despite the fact that he was working with a sore arm.

In the City League's third tussle, the Vaughans outslugged Dormont to take an 18-to-10 victory.

Hillman won over Lou's, 7 to 3. Whitaker defeated Milliken, 10-3, and the Homestead Grays sank Verona, 12 to 2, at Verona.

Rittersbaugh Wins Four W.-J. Letters

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 24.—Winning his letter in track this spring, Arthur (Red) Rittersbaugh, Canton, O., takes his place beside Wilbur (Fats) Henry, all-time All-America tackle, as a four-sport letter man at W. & J. College. Until Rittersbrugh gained his track letter, Henry was the only athlete ever to win four major sport awards.

Henry won his letter in football, baseball, basketball and track. Rittersbaugh now has letters in football, basketball, boxing and track.

But After a Blood Test What?

That's the question that should interest every sufferer. The microscope tells a truthful story—the Laboratory tests are a matter of science—but what of THE TREATMENT? How soon can HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE be lowered to normal? Can the terrible pain of stomach troubles be relieved? Will the treatment stop the rheumatic pains racking the muscles, and will the nerve-breaking insomnia yield? Will unsightly skin ailments disappear under treatment? Can the workingman and his family afford these treatments? All these questions find happy answers in the Health Service offered by this Institute.

Symptoms of a faulty blood stream we are successfully correcting: Anemia, Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, High Blood Pressure, Neuritis, Nervous Disorders, Skin Disorders—Psoriasis, Eczema, Acne, Impure Blood—Stomach Troubles. Over 40,000 treatments have been given at this Laboratory.

Junior Patrol

Water seems common to us. never run dry. it pours out of the faucets in our homes, and the big rivers here seem to Anyway, they never have. The Pittsburgh district is a well-watered district.

We even use the water to sprinkle our lawns when it gets dry so that the grass will not dry up.

But just the same, when it doesn't rain for a long time we are sorry about it. For many weeks this spring it has been dry and one or two light drizzles haven't helped much. The grass, the flowers and almost everything that grows have needed water.

In some parts of our country, especially out in the far western states, near the Rocky Mountains, there has been almost no rain for more than a month. In other great states, the rain has been so slight that the crops are drying up in the fields.

They say that the government experts estimated in the winter that the wheat crop would be between 450 and 500 million bushels. But each dry day, the crops expected grow less and now some people are wondering if there will be enough wheat. Each year, the people of the United States eat about 600 million bushels of wheat—mostly in bread of all kinds.

So you see how important the rain is where they grow wheat and other crops. Not long ago a great dust cloud blew from the West all over the East and even far out into the Atlantic Ocean. That dust was the loose soil the winds blew off the dry lands out West. They say that 300 million tons of fine top soil blew away from the farms and grazing lands.

This is a terrible loss, fellows. We all hope that the government and the states will do their best to stop any more dust storms that ruin the farms. Perhaps they can plant grass and not let the cattle graze on it until it is high and strong, and they can plant trees and bushes to hold the ground together.

But Van Court was sentenced to 15 years in prison for hitting her on the head with a hammer. She suffered scalp wounds.

Modern Paul Revere 'Gallops' in Auto

LARAMIE, Wyo., May 24.—(AP.)—Hans Olson, timber foreman, riding his trusty auto instead of a steed, warned a homesteader's family in the best Paul Revere manner and helped them reach safety as a creek dam broke.

Olson jumped into his motor car as the dam cracked and tore out at such a speed over the tortuous mountain road that he was able to aid the rancher in saving much of his belongings.

Breaks Into House To Look It Over

RACINE, Wis., May 24.—(INS.)—Caught in a vacant house, Don Mitchell, 20, a Negro, told police this story:

"I've often admired that house and I figured I would move into it some time but it seemed I was always too busy to look at the inside. So as I was passing by one night I said to myself 'Here's the house, take a look around,' and I did, even if I had to crawl through the window to do it."

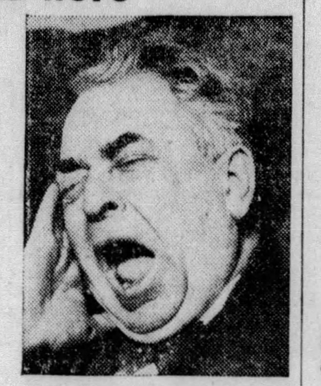
"spring fever" time is here

...and what does it mean to you?



JUST THIS: if you feel listless, tired, run-down, appetite dull, with a weak, let-down feeling ... perhaps nervous and worn out ... why not make an effort to "snap out" of this condition?

Try toning up your appetite ... increasing your red-blood-cells—get in step with those who put zip and pep into everything they do ... the best way to be happy and cheerful.

Colds, the "flu," or other illness, and poisons accumulated during the winter months, often diminish the number of red-blood-cells which are so vital in maintaining vigor ... strength ... and a clear skin.

You need a tonic—

not just a so-called tonic ... but a tonic that will tone up your blood ... bring back to normal its red-cells ... build up its hemo-glo-bin ... stimulate the gastric juice flow. S.S.S. is specially designed to do this for you.

Perhaps your blood is the cause of your trouble ... it frequently is. Try S.S.S. ... take it just before meals. Unless your case is exceptional you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite ... your color ... skin ... pep ... and energy should improve as your oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin increases.

S.S.S. is truly a blood and body invigorating tonic. Its value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal, and it is especially good as a Spring tonic.

ATE LESS—LOST 20 LBS.—FEELS BETTER — PRAISES SYL-VETTE

Says Morgantown man, "I feel more like working since taking SYL-VETTE. I do not feel so sluggish and my legs do not tire out as they did when I was overweight. I lost 20 pounds in 2 months' time by taking SYL-VETTE for breakfast and for lunch. I did not eat pork or fatty meats and very little starchy food for my dinner in the evening while I was reducing. This was not hard to do as SYL-VETTE certainly kept me from feeling hungry and I found it was so very easy to do without fattening foods. I think SYL-VETTE is very nourishing and a wonderful food substitute for people who are overweight."

Mr. Geo. A. Hunter, W. Va.

NO DRUGS — NO THYROIDS — NO SALTS — SYL-VETTE IS A FOOD

SYL-VETTE is a drugless, safe system of weight control, a condensed hunger-satisfying food substitute of which one teaspoonful equals a breakfast or a lunch.

SYL-VETTE not only satisfies hunger, but supplies nourishment and strength—also prevents sagging muscles, wrinkles, and that distressed, haggard look so common with other reducing treatments. That's because SYL-VETTE is rich in non-fattening proteins and carbohydrates.

HERE'S PROOF - 19 out of every 20 users lose 3 pounds or more the first week—10 to 15 pounds a month—which is pronounced safe by doctors. Economical, too. —30 slenderizing meals $1.00.

STOCKS STEADY IN LISTLESS TRADING

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP.)—Dullness prevailed in financial markets again today, but prices generally were steady to firm and sentiment seemed to have taken a slight turn for the better.

The inertia displayed by equities was even more pronounced than that of the preceding session. The majority of traders apparently were still somewhat confused regarding Washington legislative developments and were content to hold their snug positions on the sidelines pending a clearing of both the political and economic skies. At the same time, cautious buying was in evidence and some of the heavier stocks of yesterday showed signs of recovering.

Corn came back for some modest gains, but wheat was a trifle hesitant. Showers over the drought belt were being forecast. Cotton and silver futures moved narrowly. Rubber steadied. Bonds were resistant to further selling and the dollar was higher in terms of European gold currencies.

Market analysts were encouraged by the way in which stocks have acted recently in the face of more or less bearish news, such as the drop in steel production, the neutral tone of the presidential silver message and the omission of the important Illinois Bell Telephone dividend. Hopes were expressed that the lows of last week, on the average, represented a bottom which should hold for some time.

The mildly optimistic views of several members of the American Iron and Steel Institute, meeting here today, helped to dispel a little of the Wall street gloom. Some of the steel men believed that conditions are "distinctly better" and that, while a recession in output was at hand, it was not probable that the decline would be prolonged in view of the current needs of the country.

At the same time the total of engineering awards for the week were reported at $20,027,000, or 15 per cent below the average week for the year to date. The principal decline was in state and municipal work, while federal awards amounting to $5,285,000 were 145 per cent higher than last week and slightly over the weekly average. Bank clearings for the week, while ahead of those in the corresponding period of last year, were the smallest for any week of 1934. The total showed a decline. Dun & Bradstreet reported, of $665,575,000 from the previous week's aggregate.

WHEAT CLOSES STRONG, UP

CHICAGO, May 24.—Sustained advances scored by the corn market pulled wheat values upward in the late dealings today, offsetting earlier setbacks of the wheat market.

Concentrated buying for government sponsored agencies was a feature of the corn market, and followed liberal purchases made for the same interests the previous day. These purchases lifted the July delivery of corn to about 7½ cents above the price that huge government loans on corn were recently made at.

Corn closed strong at virtually the day's top figures, 1 to 1¾ above yesterday's finish; wheat nervous, unchanged to ⅛ lower; oats, unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

SMART NEW DEALERS NOW BUY SILVER

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, May 24.—The new deal in silver, as set forth in the President's message, has the following main features:

1—It assumes that the mere holding of a "metallic reserve" by the government for "our paper currency" will in some mysterious way serve as a "base" or a "backing." We can't get any gold, but we are to take the President's word as determining what the dollar is worth. In some vague way, the fact that the government holds a lot of metal is to reassure us.

The President thinks convertibility is unnecessary.

2—It is essentially a fiat theory of money. The President talks about the "monetary value" of metal as though it were entirely different from other value. The whole scheme is just another government "price-fixing" proposition.

The market value of silver is about 45 cents. But the government with our resources is to pay 64½ cents for some, 50 cents for some more, and more later. Then it is to call it all worth $1.29.

NOW BUYING SILVER

One object seems to be to pay us in cheap silver certificates, which the administration will say are worth a dollar, when in reality they are worth only 45 cents.

Already the "smart" new dealers are buying silver at 45 cents, which they will palm off on us as dollars. When a government becomes insolvent, as ours is, it is apt to resort to monetary schemes like this.

3—"Ultimately," the scheme means a further depreciation of our money. They are going to give us overvalued silver certificates. They are going to dilute even the vague "metallic base" we now are alleged to have, by mixing it with silver taken in at a "price" far above its actual value.

You see, they won't give us gold certificates. Why, then, put out silver certificates? The answer is plain—they want an "adequate" currency, which means a currency that will enable them to get something for nothing. In earlier times, the monarchs just clipped or debased the coins.

The whole message is most discouraging. The vague and indefinite language is typical of political juggling and insincerity. It is a new political "deal." (If we are going to inflate and debase, in heaven's name why not do it in a straightforward way?)

NOTIONS SHALLOW

The message shows the same unsound and shallow notions on money. The President still imagines that our troubles are largely monetary, and that they can be cured by such things as buying gold or doing something for silver. He still favors a "managed currency," and raising the price level, which he now disguises by talking of a "more equitable level" of purchasing power.

There is the same old patter about a "broader metallic base," and "sound but adequate currency," to which is now added "stable but equitable."

The President says we already have abundant metallic reserves, which is true. Why, then, add a lot of silver?

He says we have a "maladjustment" in our currency. But what is it? How can the addition of silver certificates correct any maladjustment, if there be one?

He advocates a tax of 50 per cent on speculative profits on silver. Why allow any such profits? If they are bad, take them all. If they are good, let them alone.

As an economist, I consider bimetallism and symmetalism both unsound and impracticable. But if we must "experiment" with them, I say, let's do it—do it openly, frankly, directly, and now.

The country is sick of uncertainty, and this stalling, hedging and trimming will make it sicker.

Hobart Buys Scale Division of I. B. M.

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP.)—Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corporation, and Herbert J. Johnson, president of the Hobart Manufacturing Company, announced completion of negotiations whereby the Hobart company purchases from International its Dayton Scale division.

The agreement, which contemplates recapitalization of the Hobart company and the acquisition by International of a substantial stock interest in the company, has been ratified by the directors of the two companies, it was stated, and will now be submitted to stockholders for their approval.

OPERATING COST OF NRA HELD HANDICAP

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Premature raising of industrial costs under the NRA doubtless retarded economic recovery by again widening the gaps between agricultural and industrial prices.

Mr. Rukeyser

"It may well be questioned whether its (the NRA's) encouragement of rising prices is not retarding rather than helping the re-establishment of better business and better standards of living, particularly in all standards above the lowest levels.

"It should be clear to everybody that the price raising provisions introduced under the NRA code system during the past year have overreached themselves and are today largely if not entirely responsible for the present decline in business.

"Clearly . . . commodity prices have advanced from 50 to 100 per cent more than total purchasing power while individual average purchasing power has hardly increased at all."

ADDS TO OVERHEAD

One aspect of the NRA, which is commonly overlooked, is that the bureaucratic machinery which it created itself adds greatly to the overhead cost of business.

By way of illustration, an important figure in the cottton garment trade sent to this column a report indicating that the budget of the Cotton Garment Code Authority would reach a million dollars a year. The report said:

"A million dollars a year is a pretty neat sum for policing an industry. Originally the highest estimate was $100,000; this grew to $200,000, then to half a million, and now a million. Our director at a salary of $25,000 is a former Army officer. You know what an Army officer's salary is. We have a staff of high priced lawyers who in private practice probably never earned a fifth of what they are getting now. Nobody dares make a public protest lest he become the target for attack and persecution by the authority."

In respect to the effect of the NRA in preventing the attainment of an approach to parity between agricultural and industrial prices, a survey showed that last December farm products sold at 56 per cent of the 1926 price level, industrial products sold under codes without price fixing agreements were quoted at 83 per cent of that level, and the products of industries operating under codes with price fixing agreements sold at 111 per cent of that level.

Wind Wrecks Test Balloon of Piccards

DETROIT, May 24.—(AP.)—A gust of wind interrupted the preparations of Prof. Jean Piccard and his wife, Jennette, for their stratospheric flight.

The wind caught the balloon in which they were to make a practice flight this morning, tore it from the hands of the ground crew at the Ford Airport and carried it into a nearby field, ripped almost in two.

Microscope Eye Swings Man Into Movies and Fair

LARRY E. ANDERSON
Mr. Anderson writing a name on the edge of a calling card.

Pitcairn Worker Now Hollywood Bound As Rice Writer

Because he has what he calls a "microscopic eye," Larry E. Anderson, 26, of Pitcairn, is bound for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Hollywood and the World's Fair in Chicago.

Before the summer is over he will have appeared in a motion picture and been one of the attractions of Ripley's "Believe-it-or Not" Odditorium at the Century of Progress.

Anderson's unique transition in employment—for 10 years he has worked as a rivet heater at the Pennsylvania Railroad shops in Pitcairn—is due entirely to his "microscopic eye." He is a rice-writer, a fine-hairwriter, a card-edge writer, and what have you, all without the aid of a glass of any kind.

Among his achievements have been the inscription of the Lord's prayer on a grain of rice, a feat depicted by Ripley in his "Believe-it-or-Not" cartoon not long ago, and the attainment of three honors at the World's Fair last summer.

UNION FIGHTS JAIL PLUMBING

Representatives of the plumbers' union and the Pittsburgh Building Trades Council yesterday demanded the County Commissioners refrain from using three County Jail prisoners from doing laborers' work on the repair of plumbing in the jail, and place in their stead union plumbers.

County Commissioners C. M. Barr and William D. Mansfield deferred decision until a full meeting of the board.

Barr explained to C. J. Lawrence, plumbers' union agent, and Leo Green, representing the building trades council, that a master plumber, William Roswell, supervised the work and did what plumbing was necessary. Barr added that since the county had no money to spend on the work, the alternate was to go on at present or halt it completely.

The plumbing in places has rotted, creating unsanitary conditions, Warden John McNeil explained.

DAVIS BATTLES EXTRADITION

Tom Davis, 19-year-old high school senior, acquitted of the slaying of State Highway Patrolman Herbert Brantlinger, was fighting his second battle for freedom in court today.

In jail since he was cleared in the patrolman's killing, the youth is seeking to avoid being sent back to Clinton County, Illinois, where charges of assault with intent to kill and robbery are held against him.

Attorney R. B. Ivory, Jr., battled to have the youth released on habeas corpus proceedings. Opposing this move were Assistant District Attorneys George F. P. Langfitt and Roy T. Clunk. Judges A. B. Reid and Thomas M. Marshall conducted the hearing.

Ivory argued that young Davis was not a fugitive from justice and was not a proper subject for extradition to another state. Gov. Pinchot recently signed extradition papers for his removal to Illinois.

Efficiency Balks Budget Reductions

Budget reductions are balked by their very efficiency, Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, budget advisor to Mayor McNair, told a meeting of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters at State College, according to word received here. Mrs. Smith declared that while everyone is in favor of economy, especially campaigning politicans, objections come when political jobs are hit.

Georgia Upholds Conviction of Red

ATLANTA, May 24.—(AP.)—The Georgia Supreme Court today affirmed the conviction of Angelo Herndon, Cincinnati Negro Communist, who was given a sentence of from 18 to 20 years in the penitentiary for attemtping to incite insurrection.

CALL MYSTERY IN BOY'S DEATH

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—(AP.)—Plans to exhume from a pauper's grave the body of Arne V. Gandy, 22, son of a New York and Teaneck, N. J., artist, were made here today as police renewed efforts to solve the mystery of the youth's death.

Pulled from San Francisco Bay January 11, by a dredger, his body was identified yesterday through fingerprints.

Among the puzzling angles of the case was an anonymous long distance telephone call from San Francisco to the youth's mother in Teaneck, the day before the body was found.

Curtis Gandy, Jr., the father, who is associated with Barron Collier, Inc., New York advertising firm, told authorities here the person making the telephone call said his son was ill, and ended the conversation with a "strange laugh."

Police expressed the belief the boy, one of the Gandy's twin sons, had been dead for several days when the telephone call was made.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"I don't know anything about that," I said. "I don't know as much as the police do, and it's a cinch they haven't got enough on him to make the pinch, even if they could find him."

Macaulay sighed. "Being a goof's lawyer is not much fun. I'll try to make him listen to reason, but I know he won't."

"I meant to ask, how are his finances these days? Is he as well fixed as he used to be?"

"Almost. The depression's hurt him some, along with the rest of us, and the royalties from his smelting process have gone pretty much on the rocks now that the metals are dead, but he can still count on fifty or sixty thousand a year from his glassine and soundproofing patents, with a little more coming in from odds and ends like—" He broke off to ask: "You're not worrying about his ability to pay whatever you'd ask"

"No, I was just wondering." I thought of something else: "Has he any relatives outside of his ex-wife and children?"

"A sister, Alice Wynant, that hasn't been on speaking terms with him for—it must be four or five years now."

I supposed that was the Aunt Alice the Jorgensens had not gone to see Christmas afternoon. "What'd they fall out about?" I asked.

Cause of Quarrel

"He gave an interview to one of the papers saying he didn't think the Russian Five Year Plan was necessarily doomed to failure. Actually he didn't make it much stronger than that."

I laughed. "They're a—"

"She's even better than he is. She can't remember things. The time her brother had his appendix out, she and Mimi were in a taxi going to see him the first afternoon and they passed a hearse from the direction of the hospital. Miss Alice turned pale and grabbed Mimi by the arm and said: 'Oh, dear! If that should be what's-his-name!'"

"Where does she live?"

"On Madison avenue. It's in the phone book." He hesitated. "I don't think—

"I'm not going to bother her." Before I could say anything else his telephone began to ring.

He put the receiver to his ear and said: "Hello . . . Yes, speaking . . . Who? . . . Oh, yes . . ." Muscles tightened around his mouth, and his eyes opened a little wider. "Where?" He listened some more. "Yes, surely. Can I make it?" He looked at the watch on his left wrist. "Right. See you on the train." He put the telephone down. "That was Lieut. Guild," he told me. "Wynant's tried to commit suicide in Allentown, Pa."

Dorothy and Quinn were at the bar when I went into the Palma Club. They did not see me until I came up beside Dorothy and said: "Hello, folks." Dorothy had on the same clothes I had last seen her in.

She looked at me and at Quinn and her face flushed. "You had to tell him."

"The girl's in a pet," Quinn said cheerfully. "I got that stock for you. You ought to pick up some more and what are you drinking?"

"Old - fashioned. You're a swell guest—ducking out without leaving a word behind you."

Dorothy looked at me again. The scratches on her face were pale, the bruise barely showed, and her mouth was no longer swollen. "I trusted you," she said. She seemed about to cry.

"What do you mean by that?"

"You know what I mean. Even when you went to dinner at mamma's I trusted you."

"And why not?"

Quinn said: "She's been in a pet all afternoon. Don't bait her." He put a hand on one of hers. "There, there, darling, don't you—"

"Please shut up." She took her hand away from him. "You know very well what I mean," she told me. "You and Nora both made fun of me to mamma and—"

I began to see what had happened. "She told you that and you believed it?" I laughed. "After 20 years you're still a sucker for her lies? I suppose she phoned you after we left: we had a row and didn't stay long."

Dorothy Apologizes

She hung her head and said, "Oh, I am a fool," in a low miserable voice. Then she grabbed me by both arms and said: "Listen, let's go over and see Nora now. I've got to square myself with her. I'm such a donkey. It'd serve me right if she never—"

"Sure. There's plenty of time. Let's have this drink first."

Quinn said: "Brother Charles, I'd like to shake your hand. You've brought sunshine back into the life of our little tot and joy to—" He emptied his glass. "Let's go over and see Nora. The booze there is just as good and costs us less."

"Why don't you stay here?" she asked him.

He laughed and shook his head. "Not me. Maybe you can get Nick to stay here, but I'm going with you. I've put up with your didoes all afternoon: now I'm going to bask in the sunshine."

Gilbert Wynant was with Nora when we reached the Normandie. He kissed his sister and shook hands with me and, when he had been introduced, Harrison Quinn.

Dorothy immediately began to make long and earnest and none too coherent apologies to Nora.

Nora said: "Stop it. There's nothing to forgive. If Nick's told you I was sore or hurt or anything of the sort, he's just a natural liar. Let me take your coat."

Quinn turned on the radio. At the stroke of the gong it was five thirty-one and one quarter, eastern standard time.

Nora told Quinn to play bartender: you know where the stuff is," and followed me into the bathroom. "Where'd you find her?"

"He came over to see her, so he said. She didn't go home last night and he thought she was still here," She laughed. "He wasn't surprised at not finding her, though. He said she was always wandering off somewhere, she has dromomania, which comes from a mother fixation and is very interesting. He said Stekel claims people who have it usually show kleptomaniac impulses too, and he's left things around to see if she'd steal them, but she never has yet that he knows of."

Always Wandering

"He's quite a lad. Did he say anything about his father?"

"No."

"Maybe he hadn't heard. Wynant tried to commit suicide down in Allentown. Guild and Macaulay have gone down to see him. I don't know whether to tell the youngsters or not. I wonder if Mimi had a hand in his coming over here."

"I wouldn't think so, but if you do—"

"I'm just wondering," I said. "Has he been here long?"

"About an hour. He's a funny kid. He's studying Chinese and writing a book on Knowledge and Belief—not in Chinese—"

"Are you tight?"

"Not very."

When we returned to the living room, Dorothy and Quinn were dancing to "Eadie Was a Lady."

Gilbert put down the magazine he was looking at and politely said he hoped I was recovering from my injury.

I said I was.

"I've never been hurt, really hurt," he went on, "that I can remember."

"Mr. Charles, if you're too busy or don't want to, I hope you'll say so, but I'd appreciate it very much if you'd let me talk to you some time when there aren't a lot of people around to interrupt us. There are so many things I'd like to ask you, things I don't know anybody else could tell me and —"

"I'm not so sure about that," I said, "but I'll be glad to try any time you want."

Gilbert Inquisitive

"You really don't mind? You're not just being polite?"

"No, I mean it, only I'm not sure you'll get as much help as you expect. It depends on what you want to know."

"Well, things like cannibalism," he said. "I don't mean in places like Africa and New Guinea—in the United States, say. Is there much of it?"

"Not nowadays. Not that I know of."

"Then there was once?"

"I don't know how much, but it happened now and then before the country was completely settled. Wait a minute: I'll give you a sample." I went over to the bookcase and got the copy of Duke's "Celebrated Criminal Cases of America" that Nora had picked up in a second-hand-book store, found the place I wanted, and gave it to him. "It's only three or four pages."

Alfred G. Packer, the "Man-eater," who murdered his five companions in the mountains of Colorado, ate their bodies and stole their money.

In the fall of 1873 a party of 20 daring men left Salt Lake City, Utah, to prospect in the San Juan country. Having heard glowing accounts of the fortunes to be made, they were light-hearted and full of hope as they started on their journey, but as the weeks rolled by and they beheld nothing but barren wastes and snowy mountains, they grew despondent. The further they proceeded, the less inviting appeared the country, and they finally became desperate when it appeared that their only reward would be starvation and death.

Dorothy asks where her father is and Nick refers her to Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney. Macaulay, calls on Nick and tells him Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting him.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

Nick is shot by Morelli. Police find Dorothy's automatic in Nick's apartment. Dorothy, beaten by Mimi, seeks shelter at Nick's, and tells new story about gun. Nick and Nora visit Jorgensens', but leave suddenly. Julia served time for working badger game, Guild tells Nick. Wynant's letter urges Nick hunt slayer.

SENATE RATIFIES TREATY ENDING SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR—SECY. HAY SIGNS (1899)

The treaty terminating the Spanish-American War was signed in Paris, December 10, 1898, ratification following. Spain withdrew from Cuba, ceded Porto Rico, Guam and the Philippines to the United States, accepting $20,000,000 for the latter. The political status of these possessions was to be determined by U. S. government.

Though the war with Spain was terminated, new troubles arose on the Philippines, the "Aguinaldo insurrection." Aguinaldo demanded the Malacanan palace and half of the war booty for himself. Refused, he proclaimed the independence of the Philippines. The attacks of the incited natives forced the United States to suppress the insurrection by arms. (U. S. History)

END OF PHILIPPINE INSURRECTION (1901)

After two years' warfare the Philippine uprising was quelled by the U. S. troops, the remnants of the insurgents driven to the mountains and Aguinaldo captured (March, 1901). In July military government was replaced by civil government, which started the work of reorganization. Above: A company of insurgents. (U. S. History)

THERMIT WELDING PROCESS

Aluminum is a powerful reducing agent; it combines with oxygen of a metal oxide, liberating the other metal. E. g. Cr_2O_3 + 2Al = Al_2O_3 (slag) + 2Cr (pure chromium). By this method, Cr, Mn and other metals can be obtained inexpensively.

If mixture of ferric oxide and powdered aluminum is ignited, molten iron of about 3,000° C. is produced (thermit process). The iron, flowing into a mold, containing separated or fractured steel parts, welds them firmly together.

ELECTRICITY FROM POWERHOUSE TO CONSUMER

In contrast to direct current, the voltage of alternating current can be changed at will by transformers: to high tension for long distance minimizing conduction losses, to low tension for homes and shops for safety. Where direct current is needed, (trolley cars, electrolyitic cells, etc.) it is generated by a dynamo driven by an alternating current motor; built in one, it is called rotary converter.

POLITICAL BALANCE OF EUROPE (1879-1894)

In 1879 the Black Eagle (Germany) made an alliance with the Double Eagle (Austria-Hungary) and in 1882 with the Roman Eagle (Italy), thus forming a triple alliance. It also made an alliance with the Bear (Russia), 1887. The Lion (Great Britain) was friendly to the Black Eagle; moreover its chief interest lay outside of Europe in the Colonies. Thus the Cock (France) was left alone.

Then the Black Eagle abandoned the Bear: so the Bear moved over to the side of the Cock (Franco-Russian alliance, 1894), while the Lion began to take notice of what was happening to the European balance.

Russia, realizing its inferiority to Germany, Czar Nicholas II became a peace advocate; and called in 1899 a peace conference of all nations, which met at The Hague, May, 1899. The conference resolved to make warfare less cruel, created a permanent Court of Arbitration. (World History)

DANIEL TAKES LEAVE OF GWENDOLEN

In her last novel, "Daniel Deronda" (1876), George Eliot contrasts a social life founded on tradition (that of the Jews) with mere individualism. Giving a just idea about the Jews this book met the approval of their leaders.

Self-centered Gwendolen Harleth marries rich, arrogant Henleigh Grandcourt out of interest, though knowing he is honor bound to another woman. Guidance of high-souled Daniel Deronda stops her murderous thoughts, the reaction to the brutality of her husband. His tragic death makes her feel partly guilty. Her hope to win Daniel changes to despair when he—discovering his Jewish parentage—devotes himself to the restoration of the national center of his race and marries Mirah, the gentle sister of the noble Jew Mordecai. Keeping Up With Science

There is no doubt that science has made great strides in all directions. But when it ain't striding, it is skipping.

It cooks up some wonderful facts for us to discover.

Just the other month, a professor stampeded in his planetarium and spotted a star sixteen million light years distant from the nearest port of call. We don't know what a light year is. But 1930 was none too heavy.

From Columbia University, hard by the subway, we learn that a tadpole's nose will grow any place. A student experimenting on a tadpole's brain made a mistake and a new discovery. After the experiment was over, we hope the tadpole got his right hat back.

We think it is Rockefeller Institute that has kept chicken tissue alive for almost 20 years. It grows so fast that it overflows the building. With the result that every five years we have to call out the forest rangers and the sappers to chop a path through chicken tissue.

An interesting item was discovered in an Illinois school when the graduating class of 1933 innoculated a guinea pig with curly wolf serum. The otherwise harmless animal thereupon chased a weasel through Canada and didn't realize its error until it caught up. The little pig did not graduate with the class of 1933.

Proving that science can be progressive without adding to the sum total of human happiness or fair play. There are some things we should know, and some things we should not. Intelligence is 90 per cent brooding and 10 per cent rejected manuscripts. That's 100 per centum. Trying to go over that mark is spilling everything into the lee scuppers.

Our highly specialized savants are trying to crack that front page too often. Ever since Newton was knocked silly by an apple the boys are wading in the sauce.

It is not enough to rank high in medical and scientific journals. Those books are only read by brother professors. Proving that a clam is only lovely and beautiful in the eyes of another clam. The lads want to earn the applause and approbation of the public. In order to do that, they must discover or invent a trinket that will be startling without being essential. They are succeeding very well.

Attacks by eagles have become so frequent over the Greek mountains that all pilots of government airplanes carry Very signal pistols, the only effective method of keeping the birds at a respectful distance.

Two out of every three families in London have only part of a house to live in; 60,000 families have only one room, while 135,000 families have two rooms.

The Tender Minded

They Deceive Themselves in Respect to Taxation Of the Masses.

Unless an examination is made of the special pleadings of propaganda groups, it is difficult to understand the backwardness shown by Congress on taxation matters.

The failure of Congress to take the logical step and introduce the general manufacturers' sales tax, which has succeeded so admirably in Canada, is in a large measure the result of slushy thinking.

William James classified men into "tough-minded" and "tender-minded."

A group of "tender-minded" folk, who seem to balk at the impact of facts, organized themselves into the so-called "General Welfare Tax League," and has carried on a steady backfire of propaganda against the sales tax idea.

In a recent bulletin, the league, opposing the sales tax because of its alleged adverse effect on consumer purchasing power, said:

"Sixty per cent of the purchases of goods and services in the United States are made by consumers with incomes of less than $2,000 per annum. The greatest decrease in buying which will result from the sales tax will be among these groups, since great numbers of these people are already spending practically every cent they make for vital necessities and have no margin left for savings. The portion of their income that goes into the payment of a sales tax will necessarily cut down their purchases by that amount . . ."

Such reasoning takes place in a vacuum, with no effort being made to relate it statistically to the world in which we live.

It is absurd to magnify the slight bearing of the sales tax on consumer spending power, when other factors have resulted in a decline of more than 50 per cent in the national income. Among the factors making for the socially ruinous decline in income has been excessive and poorly administered taxation, especially in regard to the general property tax and the income tax.

The propaganda league gives the erroneous impression that under the existing tax setup the great multitude of individuals go scot-free of taxes.

Where taxes are paid by corporations, for example, they regard taxes as part of their overhead, and undertake to absorb them in the selling prices of their merchandise.

Furthermore, irrespective of the well-intentioned views of the mistaken professors, sales taxes in Canada and in other countries have not destroyed trade.

Abstractly, it might seem that the high sales taxes on gasoline, for example, would deter persons of small means from using automobiles, but, in spite of the statistical limitations of income, the American people do continue to run motor cars—and registrations increase as men return to work.

It is a fraud to give the public the idea that only a relatively few rich persons now contribute to the support of the government.

As a matter of fact, the great bulk of taxable wealth is owned through savings banks and insurance companies and through direct stock participation by millions of thrifty Americans, not by a mere handful of the fabulously wealthy.

The real issue is not who should bear the tax burden, for, without a wide incidence of the tax burden among the whole of the gainfully employed, it would be impossible to continue the processes of government on the present scale.

The only authentic issue is between a scientific, well coordinated tax system, on the one hand, and the existing punitive array of hodge-podge and destructive taxes, on the other.

Next November, voters should turn thumbs down on Congressmen who sabotaged plans for real tax reforms.

To Abolish Begging

The Police Bureau's New Plan Is More Promising Than Previous Ones.

The police are putting into effect today a new plan to stop begging on the streets.

Such campaigns are announced periodically. Usually they accomplish little or nothing. The Director of Public Safety or the Superintendent of Police instructs the patrolmen to arrest panhandlers. But panhandling goes right on.

The new program, however, has brighter prospects of success. The Transient Division of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board is co-operating with the police, and it is proposed to treat the beggars, not as criminals, unless some specific crime other than begging is alleged, but as unfortunates needing help.

Panhandlers will be sent to the Transient Bureau at 43 Fernando street, where arrangements will be made for their care and rehabilitation at shelters for the homeless unemployed.

Citizens should co-operate by refusing to give money to street beggars. Panhandlers should be told to go to the Transient Bureau for relief.

Improving the Roads

The County's Plans for Highway Betterments Are Commendable.

It is gratifying to learn that notwithstanding a reduced budget the county will be able to improve more than 200 miles of highway this year.

Director Thomas O. Hasley, of the Highways Department, promises not only to keep the county roads in a fair condition of maintenance, but to put many of them in better condition than they ever were in before.

Seventy miles of dirt road will be widened. Brush will be cleared away. Pavements that have fallen into a bad state of repair will be "re-capped" or "seal-coated." Twelve miles of slag sidewalk will be constructed. Forty miles of new barrier will be erected.

This is progress, and the people will approve it, especially those who have to use these roads. Their name is legion.

Getting Busy?

(Copyright, 1934.)

Mexico has included in its national roads program its link in the proposed Pan-American Highway, which will extend from the Texas border to the southernmost nations of South America.

President Roosevelt has asked Congress to provide $5,000,000 in the pending appropriation bills toward the cost of constructing the international highway.

And next, Uncle Sam should construct the national super-highways he needs in his own country—one connecting with the Pan-American route, the second joining Detroit to the Gulf ports, and three others traversing the continent from Atlantic to Pacific.

Important aid for this series of projects has come from Representative Cartwright, chairman of the Roads Committee of the House of Representatives.

Commending the Hearst newspapers for their advocacy of national super-highways, Mr. Cartwright has pledged himself to support the necessary measures in Congress.

And Congress can do nothing better to stimulate industry, expand employment and build an enduring future prosperity than to make national super-highways a realized fact.

CALIFORNIA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Los Angeles has more clown cafes than any other city. They pop and wiggle out with the grotesque fronts and spirit of hoop-la from every motor highway. Crazy, cock-eyed affairs that would fit in Coney's bedlam. But oddly enough the food is generally palatable.

However, in the gastronomic galaxy are many as smartly cosmopolitan as may be found in New York or on the continent. At the Vendome, for instance, they have Bernard, a black-aproned sommelier from Monte Carlo's Hotel de Paris, trundling his vins et liquers to the tableside.

The chief innovation of smart restaurants is the portable phone, adjusted at any table and, of course, gives the phoneys a chance to make themselves overheard in phoney conversations. Is that you, Greta? This is Al. I'll be right over! Old established cafes include Victor Hugo, Levy's and Goodfellow's Grotto.

In the de luxe places the dinner jacket or white tie are seldom seen. Informality reigns. But the celebrity display is always auspicious. In the better spots the tariff is about the same as in New York. Vegetables and meats are tastier. And the fruit salads dee-vine.

* * *

Lots of folks out here with nothing to do. One of the leading do nothings, for example, phoned at exactly 4:10 a. m. "How's tricks?" he inquired. I suggested in a sleepy mumble I knew a dandy place for him to visit or remain permanently. "Like that, eh?" he jeered, "A friend calls up and you insult him." California hospitality!

* * *

Then, too, the begging letters that come to the visitor. Some, due to the times, are on the level, but the majority are from lupine professionals. One this morning came from a fellow who recalled our good old days on the New York World and life in the Marlborough. He was a bad guesser. I never worked on the World or lived at the Marlborough.

* * *

On the other hand, there are no sidewalk moochers. Or at least I have not encountered one. And the hurry-up, high-pressure boys who used to peddle the real estate are strangely mute, gone the way of the Wall Street stock and bond salesmen. To the cyclone cellars!

* * *

I called last evening on a once elevator operator in a New York hotel where I used to live. He came out here eight years ago on a vacation hitch-hike and never returned. He was sprinkling the lawn of his rose-bowered hacienda in Glendale, while his wife, knitting, footed a baby cart to and fro on the porch. A slice of not uncommon bungalow bliss. The depression had singed him. But as he said: "In New York I would be in the bread line!"

* * *

Around noon today I ascended to the roof in shorts to bask in the sun. I know next to nothing of solarium etiquette and stood about in a bath robe until an attendant fetched a chair. Most loungers were the brown of an autumn leaf and, disrobing, I expected to hear a collective Indian-like grunt: "Ugh! Heap pale face!" But it was all a pleasant experience. I suppose a fellow could start off with a solarium and by gradations work up to popping into a nudist colony without a single blush. I left jauntily with bath-robe over my arm, a glowy pink.

California and Florida seem to have kissed and made up. They used to do a lot of shadow boxing over nothing in particular. My impression is that each has a distinct following whose loyalty is as fixed as the stars. I never knew a Florida fanatic to desert to California or vice versa. So quibbling is so much argle-bargle.

* * *

Al Jolson is said to be the Pacific coast's most prolific buyer of automobiles. Every new model excites a possessive fever and rarely does he use a car more than two months, turning it in or swapping for something with a new gadget or streamline. Incidentally, Al's apartment in "The Talmadge" on Wilshire is rent free for 1934. One night in a roll of the bones with Joe Schenck, the owner, he cried: "Ten thousand berries against a year's rent free for one of your apartments!" Schenck nodded. And Jolson tossed a seven.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Respect the Other Fellow's 'No Thoroughfare' Signs

She caught her husband reading a love letter. So she's perfectly furious—wants to know if she should leave him.

(Don't be alarmed—this isn't going to be "one of those silly sob articles." Despite the sloppy beginning, it's Big Medicine for what ails most of us. Particularly in Family Life!)

Getting back to that love letter—it wasn't a recent one. That would have been bad enough! But it was twenty years old!

A big, fat, bald-headed man of thirty-nine . . . married fourteen years . . . father of five children . . . reading a letter from his first sweetheart, written twenty years ago! Isn't it enough to make any wife see red?

And what does it mean? The lady is sure she knows the answer.

IT MEANS HE'S TIRED OF HER! After all this time—after she's "slaved n' sacrificed n' given up the best years of her youth for him," he's tired of her! WANTS TO GET RID OF HER AND GO AWAY N' MAKE A SILLY OLD FOOL OF HIMSELF WITH SOME OTHER YOUNGER WOMAN!

This, says the irate wife, between sobs and snorts, is the reason why erstwhile respectable husbands and fathers of thirty-nine take to reading old love letters. And she's "told him so, right to his face."

But will he stand up like a brave man and admit it? No, he won't—the big coward! Instead he "just got red and mumbled, at first."

Then, when she kept it up, he lost his temper. Said she didn't have any right snooping and meddling. Claimed "a fellow had a right to keep some things to himself."

Did I ever hear of anything more outrageous? A man—A MARRIED MAN—claiming he had a right to keep and read old love letters, and his wife "had no business meddling"! And isn't that enough reason for any woman to leave him?

NO, IT ISN'T! And thereby hangs a vital fact which every human being, married or single, needs to know.

EVERY LIFE HAS A RIGHT TO A FEW "NO THOROUGHFARE" SIGNS—

AND ALL OTHER LIVES SHOULD RESPECT THOSE SIGNS, OR EXPECT MIGHTY DISAGREEABLE CONSEQUENCES.

Not all of us cherish old love letters. But we all cherish certain things of which that old love letter is a symbol—tender memories, secret dreams and fantasies which belong exclusively to that peculiarly private life which we can share with no one on earth.

The memory of a first sweetheart is more than "silly sentimentality." IT IS THE MEMORY OF ONE'S FIRST TRIUMPH OVER THE IGNORANCE AND AWKWARDNESS OF YOUTH . . . OF ONE'S FIRST SUCCESSFUL VENTURE IN HUMAN CONTACT . . . OF ONE'S FIRST TASTE OF POWER AND SELF-CONFIDENCE.

The spirit needs that memory. Absurd as they may seem to the intruder, such memories, such fantasies are the very stuff upon which the soul feeds when everything else has failed . . . the material with which it builds new pride and faith after life has dulled or demoralized us by its dreariness and disappointments.

And for that reason they are sacred . . . and should not be violated.

You've no more right to break into a human being's private memories than into his bank box, and you commit infinitely greater damage if you do so.

And that goes for ALL of us, whatever our relationship to each other . . . for parents and children, wives and husbands, sweethearts and friends.

Whoever you are—whatever your bond—

RESPECT THE OTHER FELLOW'S "NO THOROUGHFARE" SIGNS.

RIGHT OR WRONG?

By Winifred Black

I'll take any one of them, so long as they are decidedly what they are and nothing else.

I'm sick and tired of purple and brown and tan color—and blue black and yellow while—I want black to be black. As black as midnight, as black as black ink, as black as the raven's wing.

I'm sick of greenish black and grayish black and creamish white, and a mixture of red and yellow that's just maybe and maybe not.

I'm beginning to feel the same way about ideas.

It's so confusing to hear so much about the two sides to every question.

I'm tired of perhaps and maybe and possibly. I would love to hear some good old ranting, raving pronouncements on right and wrong, good and bad, clever and dull.

It's wicked to steal a silver dollar, and high finance to steal a million.

It's cruel and tyranical to make a child realize that a law is a law—what is he but a playful little child, why be too serious with him.

But it's all right to bring him up without discipline and without regulation so that everybody will flee the house when he comes in at the door, and keep him wondering why everybody hates him—all his life.

It is wrong to start deliberately a wilful and malicious lie—but it's all right to be sly and deceitful and two-faced and double-dealing.

If you kill a man you mustn't be judged a murderer until everybody in the rest of the four continents knows who your mother married and why your father was so often away from home.

Nothing is right unless we think it's right.

And nothing can possibly be wrong unless we know every minute of the day or night that it is absolutely and irretrievably wrong.

True or false—don't try to decide.

Everything is a mixture—a coward or a hero—well, that isn't so hard to decide is it?

Yes, I'm afraid I'm a little tired of the arguing and the hair-splitting and I'd like to get to the time when I'm either hot or cold, wet or dry, mad or pleased, and, quite incidentally of course, right or wrong.

It would be quite a relief wouldn't it?

Human Side of the News

Clarence Darrow, Critic of the NRA, Has Always Been A Vigorous Hurler of the Monkey Wrench

By Edwin C. Hill

THE gaunt and grizzled old lion of the law courts, that tireless defender of lost causes, Clarence Darrow, seems to be more or less in the New Deal, but not precisely of it. As chairman of an important board applying the codes to small businesses, Mr. Darrow is said to have uttered sentiments hardly flattering to some of the applications of the new millenium. But that's his way. It was given to him in this life to be "agin" almost everything which savored of wealth and power. All his life he has been a protestant, an objector, a lusty-handed hurler of the monkey wrench.

America knows a no more picturesque personality, with his rugged, deep-chiseled countenance and his great, massive shoulders. Always, wherever this stormy petrel of the criminal law sounds his cry, the great, massive shoulders tell the real story of what is going on. You can go back to those tense days out in Boise, Idaho, back in 1903, when Moyer, Big Bill Hayward and Pettibone were on trial for the prankish performance of blowing Ex-Gov. Frank Steuenberg to bits at his own garden gate.

* * *

Senator Borah Darrow's Opponent

THAT was one of the first of the nationally famous cases that Darrow has had. He defended the three agents of the old miners' confederacy, and Senator Borah was his opponent. They said then that it was Clarence Darrow's eloquent and incredibly insulting shoulders that saved the three mine working gentlemen from the gallows. Much, much later, those shoulders were the target of all eyes when Loeb and Leopold were on trial at Chicago—the hardest case Darrow ever had—and again when they derided the late William Jennings Bryan at Dayton, Tenn., for believing everything he read in the Bible.

For 50 years in the courts of the land, the big shoulders have been lifting and twisting and shrugging as they fought for the lives of accused men and speaking a veritable language of their own. He doesn't tramp around or stamp his feet or make unnecessary gestures or motions. His feet stay put. His hands are seldom lifted, except to scratch his head or an ear with a forefinger. He wastes no motion or effort. His voice is a drawl, with "ahs" and "ums" spacing the slowly uttered words, and only once in half an hour will his voice take on a cutting edge or ring with a note of passion.

He is a technician of distinction—and why not, after 50 years of practice? He is probably not conscious of the technic that never misses a chance to impress the jury. It is ingrained by now, ingrained by habit, and it is a marvelous thing to watch. Even the shaggy eyebrows play a part. One must not forget the shaggy eyebrows, for next to the shoulders they play a speaking part. They can be commendatory or condemnatory; benevolent or malevolent; kind or vicious. They are raised in sweet friendship and understanding, or drawn together in bitter hostility.

Believe it, that old, lined, seamed face, upon which the storms of 50 violent years have beaten, is a most expressive map of the human emotions at their keenest. He is over 75, the ancient champion of lost causes, and since 21 he has beaten his head against walls that men have raised to protect the truth or to hide it, whichever you choose. Once in a while the head has breached a wall but it bears its scars.

* * *

His Eyes Usually Twinkle with Fun

THE hair is growing pretty thin. It really makes you think of the mane of an old lion. Long locks get loose from the combing and fall across the forehead and over an eye. But gray has hardly touched it. That's the amazing thing. It is not gray, or white, it is still brown. The forehead is rather low for the forehead of an intellectual man, but is extremely broad. Under the shaggy eyebrows, gray-blue eyes are very deep set, wide apart. Usually they twinkle with fun and good humor, but now and then they can grow stern as death.

Forehead and cheeks are lined with the lines of thought and care, and age, too. The nose is a big jutting nose, over a wide, humorous mouth. And the chin is like a chin carved out of granite. The prevailing characteristic of this whole countenance is amiability, benevolence, tolerance. Everybody likes Darrow, no matter how much they may detest some of his ideas or performances in fighting for human beasts. He is mighty likeable—even lovable. He makes you think of an old-time Western cattleman who has made a success of life after a hard time of it, and who loves the world and everybody in it.

They take in every item of his appearance—the old suit of gray, the big, broad-brimmed slouch hat, the low white collar and wispy string tie, the unpolished shoes and all the rest of an unconsidered garb. They note that the one-time more than six-foot figure is beginning to stoop more than a little at nearly 76; that the one-time piercing eyes are growing just a little duller, and that the voice is a thought slower. But these things are physical. Darrow is as young in the spirit as when he fought Bill Borah out in Boise. He clings to old beliefs and clings tighter than ever.

Congress Keeps U. S. Army In Seventeenth Place

By James T. Williams, Jr.

ANOTHER Congress is about to adjourn without the enactment of a single constructive legislative proposal for the rescue of the American Army. This Congressional neglect of the Army for the last 10 years has starved it into seventeenth place among the armies of the world. The strength of our Army today is about the same as that of the Greek army.

Under the chairmanship of Senator Wadsworth, of New York, Republican, and recently under the chairmanship of Senator Shepherd, of Texas, Democrat, the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has done its best to aid the Army. The efforts of this committee, however, have been nullified by the hostility to all sound recommendations for the upbuilding of the Army which has been manifested by the House Committee on Military Affairs for the last 10 years.

* * *

House Rebuked By Wadsworth

THE deplorable record of the House in failing to provide for the Army was recently the subject of a timely admonition from that member of the House who is best informed on military affair. This is Mr. Wadsworth, of New York, formerly a Senator from that state and chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, and now a Representative in Congress from New York and still deeply interested in the Army.

"The Congress, generally speaking," said Congressman Wadsworth, "has taken a quite different attitude toward the Navy and the Marine Corps than it has taken over a long period of years toward the Army.

"Students of military history and of the debates in the Congress with respect to military subjects will generally find that the average citizen of the United States and the average member of Congress is perfectly ready and willing to admit that he could not command a battleship, but there are thousands and thousands of civilians who have been confident, as a general rule at least up to the World War, that they could command a regiment of infantry.

"It has been the habit of the American people to believe that the command of soldiers is a comparatively easy thing and that mistakes have been the cause of getting us into many wars causing the loss of thousands of lives and the expenditure of billions out of the Treasury.

"It was not until 1920, when the national defense act was revised, that any important steps were taken to give the Army a chance to govern the Army in its interior organization to bring it up to date."

When Congress enacted this legislation, the realities of the great war were still fresh in the minds of Congress and the people of this country. In framing that legislation, Congress realized the necessity of adequate protection at a minimum of expense.

Congress provided in the Defense Act for a peacetime regular army of arms, equipment, ammunition and other munitions for a minimum combat force of a million men.

Instead of carrying out the policy to which the Defense Act committed Congress, it has failed over a long period of years to appropriate, for the maintenance of the force for which this legislation provides.

Army Now Below Peace Strength

THE Army today is far below peace-time strength and its combat-strength would just about fill the Yankee Stadium. It is estimated that even this combat strength of 30,000 is so scattered that it could not be gathered into efficient combat units for several months should the country suddenly face an emergency.

An army of only 118,000 is too small to perform the missions assigned to it in the national defense act, and even the army that we have is not supplied with modern equipment which it must have to be effective. Although the Great War ended in 1918, what is left of our regular arm is still for the most part armed and equipped in 1934 as it was in the Great War.

For this neglect, Congress is to blame. For the failure of Congress to provide for the Army, the hostility of the House Committee on Military Affairs and the House Committtee on Appropriations are chiefly to blame.
